

Sweeping economic package is revealed

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Democrats unveiled today an economic program putting top priority on a tax cut for the poor and moderate-income persons. Speaker Carl Albert said he hoped it would be pushed through the House within 60 days.

He said the tax cut should range between $10 billion and $20 billion, but he declined to settle on any specific figure.

"We mean business," Albert told a news conference. "We intend to act."

"I have talked to the President and I have told him we will cooperate wherever we could. I hope we see eye-to-eye because we are all in the same boat together," Albert said.

"Our country is suffering from ills it hasn't suffered from in a long time and, in some cases, not since the beginning of the country. We don't want to count anyone out but we intend to move," Albert said.

Rep. Jim Wright, D-Tex., chairman of the leadership task force which drew up the policy platform, said the committee had differing ideas about the size of a tax cut but said they would endorse "whatever is enough to release money into the economy."

Albert said the task force hadn't considered a tax rebate as apparently will be proposed by President Ford, but said "that question is still open ... if it can be done and should be done, of course we will do it."

Other features of the Democratic policy to revive the economy include public jobs for the unemployed, lower interest rates and standby authority for limited wage and price controls.

These and other recommendations by a party leadership task force were addressed specifically to the appropriate legislative committees "for presentation to the House ... as soon as possible and in no case later than 90 days after our convening." Congress convenes Tuesday.

The emphasis on tax reduction — already advocated by President Ford — appeared to make it certain that the Republican administration and Democratic Congress will reach early agreement on relief for low and middle taxpayers, at least.

The Democratic recommendations were general enough to cover the kinds of reductions Ford is reported about to propose.

Sources reported meanwhile that Ford would make a nationwide television-radio address tonight in order to give the public a preview of his economic plans. He will appear before Congress Wednesday to present the State of the Union message.

The recommendations labeled urgent by the Democrats included: —Tax Relief. The task force suggested increasing the personal exemption, the standard deduction and the special minimum allowance that helps poorer people, easing the payroll tax on low incomes and establishing tax credits. But it left the way open for other proposals as well. Ford is reported considering a 10 per cent rebate on 1974 income taxes. The Democrats said the revenue loss should be recouped as much as possible "by closing the loopholes that now enable large corporations and wealthy individuals to pay little or no

Facts are promised

Group begins its study of the CIA

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller today promised to get all of the facts as a blue-ribbon panel began its probe of alleged domestic spying by the CIA.

"This commission has but one purpose," Rockefeller said after a brief swearing-in ceremony. "We're going to get to the bottom of this problem."

CIA Director William E. Colby was scheduled to be the first witness to appear before the eight-member panel headed by Rockefeller.

Meeting in a conference room next to the vice president's office, the commission is expected to be briefed by Colby on the results of his own inquiry into the agency's alleged domestic surveillance activities.

The panel first must decide a number of procedural questions such as whether to question witnesses under oath and whether to seek subpoenas power.

Former CIA chiefs James R. Schlesinger and Richard M. Helms are also to appear.

Helms, now ambassador to Iran, headed the agency from 1966 to 1973 and has denied that any illegal domestic operations were conducted during his tenure. Schlesinger, now secretary of defense, reportedly uncovered the alleged domestic surveillance operations during his brief service as agency chief in 1973.

The commission has yet to officially name a staff director although administration sources have confirmed that David W. Belin has been chosen for the post. Belin served on the Warren Commission that investigated the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. A source said announcement of Belin's appointment was being held up until background checks on the 46-year-old Iowa lawyer have been completed.

In an interview with the Des Moines Sunday Register, Belin was quoted as saying: "I've heard people say there is a gray area in this matter. My own feeling is, if there is any doubt, that doubt is resolved against the agency."

Belin also said he had demanded a "first rate, independent staff" and he promised that "the chips will fall where they may."

The commission is scheduled to report its findings to the White House within 90 days.

Second entry in Lebanon

Israeli troops on move

By The Associated Press

Israeli troops crossed into southeast Lebanon early today for the second night in succession and reported they destroyed five houses believed to have been used by the Palestinian guerrillas.

An Israeli spokesman said the troops raided the villages of Halqa and Shuba. He said they were fired on from a house in Shuba and destroyed the house with their return fire.

One Israeli was wounded, the spokesman said. There was no mention of Arab casualties.

Israel reported one guerrilla killed and three bridges and two water conduits blown up in another raid in the same area early Sunday. It said there were no casualties among the raiders, but the Palestine guerrilla command in Beirut claimed heavy Israeli losses. It also reported three guerrillas wounded and two missing.

Israeli forces now have raided the Arkoub area of southeast Lebanon four times this year, taken five prisoners for interrogation and blown up 11 houses.

President Ford in an interview with Time magazine said progress must be made toward Arab-Israeli peace before the United States can give a formal guarantee to protect Israel's existence.

"We have given everything except that," he said. "We have often made commitments that we consider Israel a necessary state in the Middle East, both as to integrity of territory and its existence."

"I wouldn't rule out (a guarantee) under some circumstances, but there has to be, in my judgment, some real progress there before that step would be taken."

"It so happens that there is a substantial relationship at the present time between our national security interests and those of Israel."

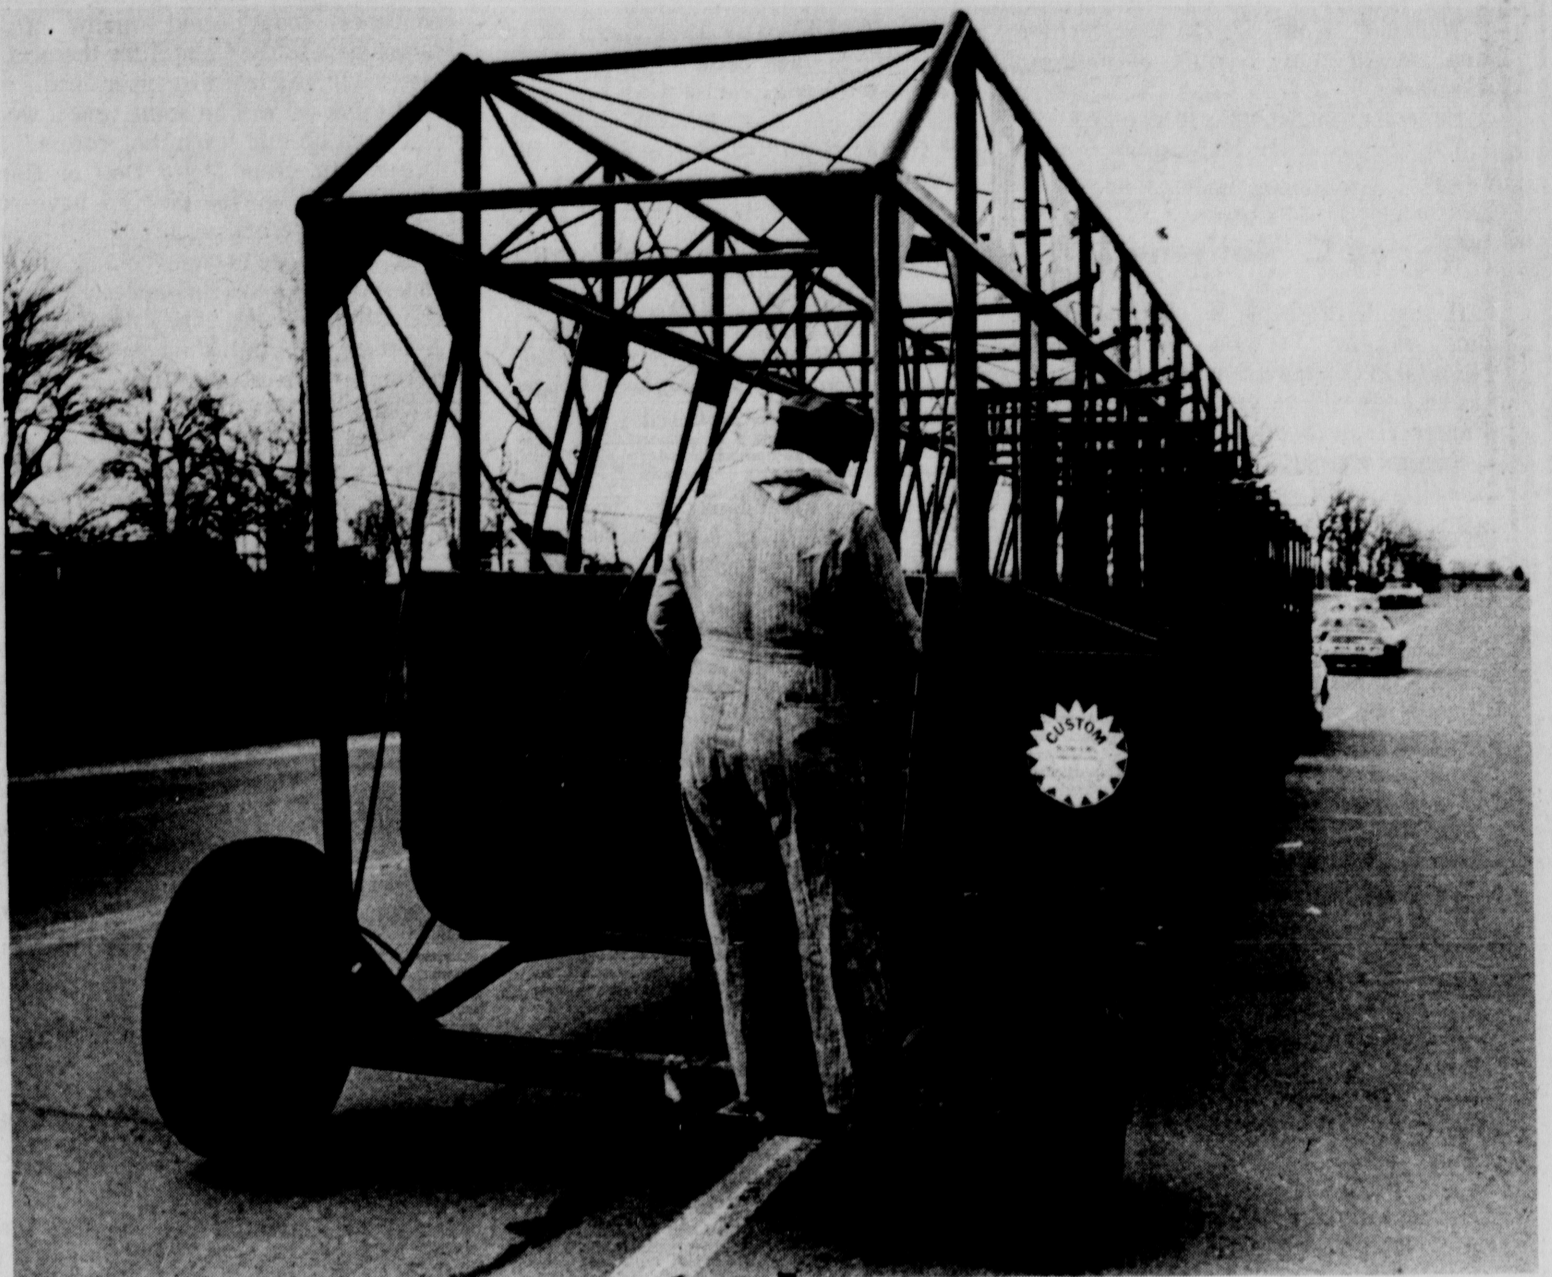

"But in the final analysis, we have to judge what is in our national interest above any and all other considerations."

Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi of Iran ended a five-day visit to Egypt and in a joint communique endorsed President Anwar Sadat's "wise national policy in dealing with the Middle East crisis."

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States today protested what it termed a grave violation of the Vietnam peace agreement by Hanoi in resuming warfare in South Vietnam.

The note was addressed to eight nations who are guarantors of the 1973 Paris peace agreement under which U.S. troops were withdrawn from Southeast Asia.

The firm repaired and straightened the gate after someone ran into it while illegally using the racetrack on the weekend of Jan. 5. Fair Director Wendell Smith said Monday that he thought the State Highway Patrol had made an arrest in connection with the incident, however, the Patrol office in Lee's Summit had no such report. Sheriff Emmett Fairfax said Monday that a man was questioned about the accident, but no one was charged.

Strong defense of Nixon

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (AP) — His former White House press secretary has pictured Richard M. Nixon as "a beaten man," incarcerated in his seaside villa.

In his first lengthy, on-the-record interview since Nixon resigned last August, Ronald L. Ziegler told the Los Angeles Times he is "fed up with Richard Nixon taking it in the ear." Ziegler accused some members of Congress and of President Ford's staff of excessive vindictiveness, even to the point of not forwarding mail.

"What severity of penalty does this society want from a leader?" Ziegler asked. "You know, he resigned in disgrace. He is certainly a beaten man ..."

"You only have to be here to sense it is exile," Ziegler said. "The abandonment by friends, the isolation, the vindictiveness of some in Washington, including some in Congress and some in the Ford White House."

Ziegler noted criticism of Ford's pardon of Nixon, particularly in light of the fact that a number of his close associates have been convicted and sent to prison. Ziegler said, "If society wants to put him in a cell, there is a cell out there (at his San Clemente home). Have you seen the size of his office? What more is wanted?"

Ziegler, who has continued to serve as Nixon's spokesman during the "transition" period, criticized present White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen and other White House aides for indicating that Nixon has overspent his transition budget. He said the San Clemente staff was going by past budgets, which were more generous than the one finally set for Nixon.

He also categorized as "absurd" Nessen's assertion that Nixon will be billed for the part of his cross-country flight on Air Force One that took place after Ford had been sworn in as President.

"He was President when he left Washington," Ziegler said. "What was he going to do — alight in Jefferson City, Mo., and make his way out here by train?"

As for Nixon's health, Ziegler said that "what is happening to Richard Nixon as a human being" as a result of such rough treatment is "very serious."

Lay-offs, reduced work week reported

Approximately 50 employees of the Rival Manufacturing Co. plant here were laid off Friday and the work-week at Town and Country Shoes Inc. was reduced to three days last week.

The employee cutback at Rival, company community and industrial relations manager Bill Hall stressed, "is not to be confused with our temporary plant shutdown at Christmas, which is pretty well routine."

The local plant, which primarily produces electrical motors for can openers and other kitchen appliances, was affected because some assembly lines at Rival plants in Kansas City and Clinton were earlier shut down due to lack of business, Hall explained.

"It's inter-related," he said, "because if you aren't assembling as many appliances, you consequently don't need as many components."

Hall attributed the over-all lack of business volume "to the fact that buyers for retail markets are being much more conservative this year" in order to avoid inventory stockpiles.

Hall said Rival officials initially thought the layoffs would have to be made before Christmas, "but we avoided it, even though it was costly ... however, it just got to the point where there was no work for several employees."

Hall said he did not know this time if there would be additional layoffs. He also said he did not know when full local plant production would be resumed.

"We all feel sales will be good this year and overall production will probably increase," he said. "It's just that the first half of the year is getting off to a slower start than we would like." Hall said he was "optimistic" about the local plants' year in general.

Commenting on the work-week reduction at Town and Country, company vice president Delbert Wagenknecht said, "We will have to be working in the foreseeable future on a week-to-week

A song of the times...

DETROIT (AP) — A new recording is aimed at making a folk hero out of the laid-off auto worker.

"Dear Mr. President, daddy just lost his job for awhile at the car-making factory," begins the lament, a narrative set to music. It features a 10-year-old girl whose family has endured the recession blues.

Paula Webb, the Ypsilanti, Mich., girl who sings "Please Mr. President," knows what she's talking about. Her mother, though not her father, and her uncle and grandmother all are laid-off Ford workers.

The song's author, Randall Carlisle, 25, is a radio newsman at CKLW in Windsor, Ont., who says he has written too many layoff bulletins. He says he thinks the record will capture the fancy of a country in recession.

Station officials said they plan to release the record nationwide this week.

On the record, Paula reads a letter to the President.

It was Paula's first professional job. Her father, Paul Webb, is a professional country and western singer.

"It's the first time I heard myself on a record, and I said, 'That isn't me,'" Paula said. "I liked it, but I don't think I would do it again. I want to be a majorette."

Midwest not out of it yet

Intense winter storms blamed for 51 deaths

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Severe storms raged through the Midwest and Southeast over the weekend, killing at least 51 persons. Rain and snow were expected to continue disrupting widespread parts of the nation today.

The Midwest blizzard — described by a National Weather Service spokesman in Minneapolis as the worst in 55 years — whipped winds to 90 miles per hour and left at least 50 persons dead between Friday night and today. Another person died in a Florida tornado.

"The storm was as large as any hurricane," the Weather Service spokesman said. It downed power lines, stranded motorists and disrupted air traffic. Michigan officials estimated damage at $1 million in that state alone.

By today, storm related deaths had climbed to 11 in Nebraska, where 16 inches of snow fell, eight dead in Iowa, 12 in Minnesota, seven in North Dakota and two in Michigan, eight dead in South Dakota and one each in Illinois and Wisconsin.

Six members of a family from Summit, S.D., were found dead in their home Sunday night. They apparently died of asphyxiation after sewer gas permeated the home when a sewer exhaust became clogged with ice and snow, authorities said.

Frigid arctic blasts continued over the upper Midwest, keeping most of the area below zero today, but skies were generally clear.

Winds averaging nearly 60 miles per hour whipped through the central Rockies. Rain, freezing rain and snow slammed the Pacific Northwest. Travelers advisories for winds and high wind warnings were posted for Southern California mountains and deserts, and for Colorado and Wyoming.

Rain continued over much of the middle and lower Atlantic region, with Sumter,

S.C., reporting an inch of rain.

Meanwhile, snow, rain and tornadoes battered the Southeast, only two days after another series of twisters left 12 dead on Friday. In Sunday's storms, one person died and several others were hurt in a Panama City, Fla. twister. Other tornadoes touched down in northern Florida and Georgia.

In Sink Creek, Fla., Winfred Dawson said his wife and nine-month-old son were shielded from tornado winds when a refrigerator door fell on them as they crouched for safety on the floor. The rest of the house was blown down.

"I came back to the house and it wasn't there," said Dawson. He heard his wife screaming and his son crying, and ran for help. "We finally got the refrigerator door pulled back and there they were — under there." Dawson said.

His wife suffered severe facial cuts but the son was uninjured.

Eight inches of snow fell Sunday at Crossville, Tenn., seven inches at London, Ky., and three inches at Nashville, Tenn. and Huntsville, Ala. Rain fell in McComb, Miss., where a tornado on Friday had left four dead amid wreckage not fully cleared by Sunday.

Elsewhere on Sunday, strong winds whipped through southern California and freezing temperatures gripped the Plains states into central Texas.

Many states braced for expected snowstorms today. Traveler's advisories were posted from Tennessee to Vermont and in Massachusetts, Connecticut and New Jersey. Warnings also were posted from Pennsylvania to Virginia, and for the Gulf Coast states.

More snow was expected in the Appalachians, the Rockies, Minnesota, the Dakotas, Wisconsin and Michigan.

Freshman politicians begin second work week

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Thirty-three freshmen representatives and seven freshmen senators begin their second week in office as the legislature convenes today, and many of the newcomers to the Capitol say the next few weeks will be a learning experience.

"I think we will be doing well if we can just keep up and learn the process," said Democratic Rep. Doty Doll of Kansas City. "Then, maybe we can have some effect in the second year."

Of the 28 Democrats coming into the House only one has served before while all five Republicans are newcomers to Jefferson City. In the Senate, however, six of the seven freshmen have served in the House and are acquainted with the legislative process and Democrat Harry Wiggins of Kansas City has served in the past as state liquor control supervisor and general counsel of the Public Service Commission.

A number of the freshmen representatives said they were anxious to get into the work of the session and learn the procedures, but some believe their effect in the legislature will be felt in the near future.

"It makes good sense for me to stand and watch a minute," said Republican William Stoner of Springfield. "But I don't intend to do that all session or even the first half."

Democrat John Rollins of Columbia said he felt the freshmen could have some impact during their first session.

"We're not acting as a group," he commented. "But 33 people, while not enough to carry any vote, is certain to have to be reckoned with. What we can do is not necessarily on a political party line. A lot of issues are not partisan but tend to be geographical or philosophical and it will probably be in that area that we will have an impact."

Republican William Perry of Webb City agreed with Rollins, adding that while it would be hard to gauge their impact during the session, the freshmen will probably "try to become as involved as we can."

As opposed to the freshmen in U.S. Congress, who saddled with the seniority system, have this year decided it was time for them to form a coalition so they will be heard, the newcomers to the Missouri House don't feel a need to form a block to be effective. "I have the impression that the old veterans are listening to us," noted Stoner. "They recognize there is a different political climate than before and that we greenhorns are more in tune with it than they are."

The freshmen indicated a willingness to cooperate in any way with all the legislators to come up with the best legislation for the state.

"It's like a melting pot," said Democrat H.N. Sutherland of Bethany. "We all work together to come up with the best program possible."

Economic plan

taxes at all." But it recommended no specific tax reforms.

—Lower Interest Rates. The task force called on the Federal Reserve to step up the growth of the money supply, saying it had been held to 2 per cent during much of 1974, when 4 to 5 per cent was needed.

The task force also called for allocation of credit toward such areas as housing, small business, food production, power generation, state and local government and productive capital investment.

If these actions had not produced results by July 1, the statement continued, Congress should consider steeply rising taxes on excessive rates of interest, such as 9 per cent and more.

—Jobs. The task force said the need for public service jobs now exceeds the 750,000 estimated last month. More such jobs should be provided, it said, and the flow of federal funds for approved public works such as water pollution abatement, flood control, highway, mass transit and others should be speeded.

—Housing. A range of possibilities for stimulating housing were offered, such as allowing savings institutions to pay higher interest, subsidizing interest on low and medium price housing, incentives for rehabilitation of existing buildings and short-term help for homeowners falling behind in payments because of unemployment or falling income.

—Energy Conservation. The task force said legislative committees should consider and recommend one or more possible actions, including mandatory allocation of petroleum and other energy sources; higher gasoline taxes; rationing of gasoline and fuel oil; higher taxes on pleasure craft and big automobiles; restricting the sale of gasoline on certain days, such as week-ends, easy-term loans for home insulation; review of utility rate structures that encourage heavy use of energy.

The statement said a gasoline tax increase would have to be studied carefully to prevent treating too harshly persons whose employment depends on use of automobiles. Rebates to such persons or dedication of the yield to a program of developing alternate fuel sources should be considered, it said.

—Wages and Prices. Calling the present Council on Wage and Price stability "a toothless tiger," the task force recommended "an independent agency with subpoena power, the resources to hold extensive hearings, the authority to delay price increases up to 90 days, and in extreme cases the authority to impose controls more permanently on a selective basis." The selection, it said, should "be aimed at those industries where near-monopoly and administered prices render the forces of true competition inoperable."

—Needy. The task force urged Congress to block "the apparent intention of the administration to increase the price of food stamps to low income Americans" and to step up help to needy aged, blind and disabled.

In addition to the measures targeted for very early attention, the task force urged that Congress get to work promptly on developing a national health plan, encouraging the search for new sources of energy on a crash basis like those that led to development of atomic energy and the man-on-the-moon program; antitrust law strengthening; consumer protection, increased food production; aid to specific industries suffering disproportionately and help for the aging.

To complete the organizational work for the new Congress, the Democratic caucus returns to work today to consider, among other things, a proposal to create a special committee to investigate the Central Intelligence Agency.

Three congressional committees already have announced inquiries into allegations that the covert agency violated its charter by engaging in domestic spying. A special commission headed by Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller is making an investigation for the executive branch.

The caucus also is scheduled to vote on a proposal to abolish the House Internal Security Committee, formerly the Committee on Un-American Activities, by transferring its jurisdiction to the Judiciary Committee. A similar proposal lost in the closing weeks of the last Congress and, regardless of the caucus decision, the full House, including Republicans, will have the final word on this issue.

Other resolutions call for further opening up of legislative proceedings to the news media and public, continuing the trend of changes voted at the December caucus of the new congressional Democrats.

Air time is requested for Ford message

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford requested the national radio and television networks today for time at 9 p.m. EST to disclose his economic and energy program to the American people, a White House spokesman said.

Ford will "tell the American people what is required of all of us to make these programs work," the spokesman said. The 20-minute, prime-time address will cover the major elements of the proposals Ford will present Congress in his State of the Union address Wednesday afternoon, White House Deputy Press Secretary John Hushen said.

Hushen and other White House officials would not elaborate on the President's programs.

But other administration officials say Ford will request:

—A rebate of roughly 10 per cent of the income taxes paid by individuals for 1974 to inject roughly $15 billion into the economy.

—A reduction in 1975 taxes to be implemented through reduced withholding.

—A tariff of up to $3 per barrel on imported oil and an excise tax of the same size on domestic oil in an effort to reduce energy consumption by allowing higher prices for gasoline and other petroleum products.

Hushen said Ford's speech will be delivered from the White House library, a more informal setting than the usual behind-the-desk address from the Oval Office.

Sources said the President has been experimenting with different formats for his broadcast addresses, and settled upon the book-lined library as the one he prefers.

It was incorrectly reported in the Tuesday Democrat and Wednesday Capital that Reggie Jones, 19, who is scheduled for trial in Circuit Court March 4 on charges of selling marijuana, lives at 1117 East Broadway. Jones' address is 2117 East Broadway.

U.S. can't offer Israel any guarantee

NEW YORK (AP) — President Ford says the United States cannot guarantee Israel's security at this time.

"We have to judge what is in our national interest above any and all other considerations," Ford said in an interview published Sunday in Time magazine.

He said some steps toward peace in the Middle East must be made before any American assurance of Israeli national security is forthcoming.

"We have often made commitments that we consider Israel a necessary state in the Middle East, both as to integrity of territory and its existence," Ford said.

"I wouldn't rule out a guarantee under some circumstances, but there has to be, in my judgment, some real progress there before that step is taken," he said.

The magazine quoted the President as warning that the hazards of the Middle Eastern tensions increase "every day that we don't get some action for further progress in the settlement of some of those disputes."

The prospects for a Middle Eastern war are "very, very serious," he said.

"It so happened that there is a substantial relationship at the present time between our national security interests and those of Israel," said the President. "But in the final analysis, we have to judge what is in our national interest above any and all other considerations."

Ford also agreed with the view of Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger who, in an interview with Business Week magazine, refused to rule out force in the Middle East in the face of economic strangulation of the Western nations.

"Strangulation is the key word," Ford said. "He didn't say force would be used to bring a price change" of Middle East Oil products.

Baby cereal recall ordered by Heinz

PITTSBURGH (AP) — H.J. Heinz Co. has recalled all boxes of its instant dry baby cereal after small metal fragments were found in two boxes.

The company said in its announcement over the weekend that the recall was voluntary and being taken because it could not ensure that other boxes might not contain similar fragments, found to be pieces of aluminum.

A Charlotte, N.C., housewife found the metal in the boxes a week ago.

Last month, two other consumers in Charlotte found metal filings in boxes of Instant Rice Cereal.

Products being recalled include Instant Rice Cereal, Instant Barley Cereal, Instant Oatmeal Cereal, Instant Mixed Cereal and Instant High Protein Cereal.

"Although no injuries have been reported and the possibility of any injury occurring is slight, we believe consumer safety must be our paramount concern," said Raymond F. Good, president of Heinz U.S.A.

Highway accidents fatal for three

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Three persons died over the weekend in Missouri traffic accidents, one of them a young Sikeston woman whose car went off a county road and plunged down an embankment while a sheriff's deputy pursued her.

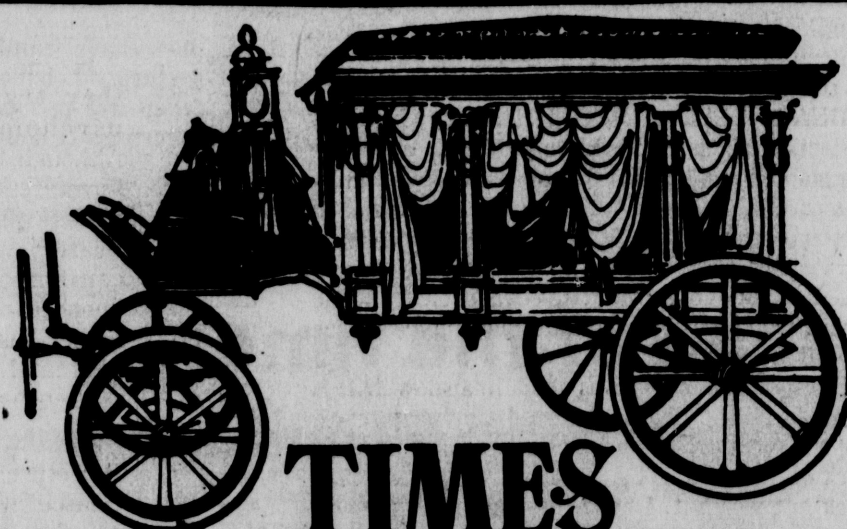

Ava Gail Brazeal, 23, was being chased at speeds up to 70 miles per hour on an unmarked backroad south of Sikeston after the sheriff's office received a report of a disturbance involving her at a tavern, the deputy, Gerald Inman, said.

He said the car went down the embankment at a 90-degree turn in the road and burst into flames. Mrs. Brazeal was thrown from the wreckage.

The other victims of weekend traffic accidents were Leon Ware, 37, Windsor, Mo., and George Brooks, 23, Kansas City.

Ware was killed Saturday when his car went off a county road near his home and overturned.

Brooks died early Sunday in a Kansas City hospital of injuries he suffered Saturday in the south part of the city. Police said his auto was involved in a collision with another car, then smashed into a pole.

Decorators plan for change

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

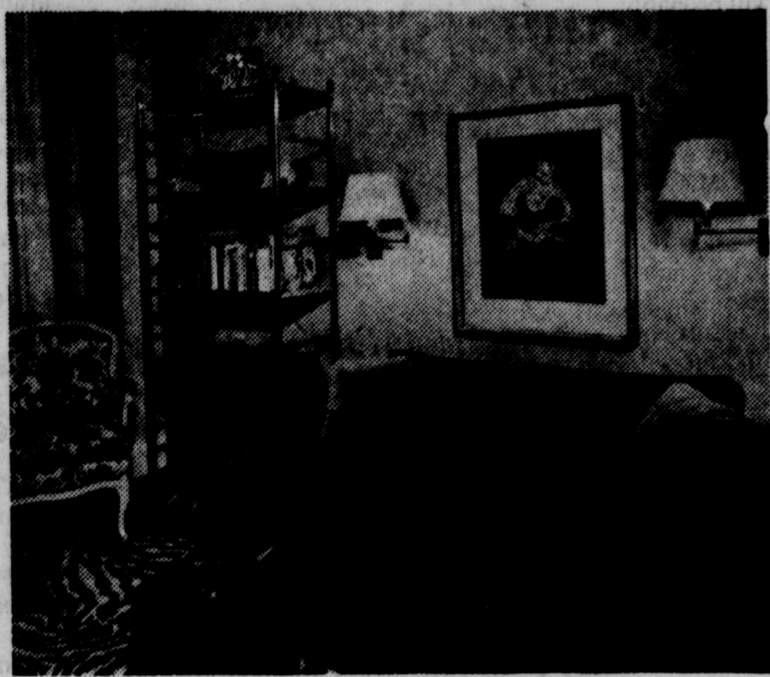

At least four times — as a newlywed, in your 30s, your affluent 40s and at your retirement — you are likely to decorate your home. Wisely purchased, some of your furnishings should see you through all four stages, say two popular New York decorators, Clare Fraser and Liz Shean, who feel that inflation makes this advice more important than ever.

You'll add and subtract home furnishings as you go along, of course, they say, but you will not discard big, expensive items if you give some thought to the long range possibilities when making the acquisitions. When you must sell them you should realize something on your original investment.

"Some young people will pay three or five thousand dollars for bedroom sets that can go out of style and they may never get a nickel out of them," insists Liz Shean, who believes they should "buy more selectively."

A handsome piece of furniture (of timeless design) can increase in value as time goes on, the two say, and a fresh look can always be achieved with new fabrics and accessories. Low-cost gingham or polka dots "can be charming in the homes of young people," the interior designers point out.

You can always try to get a different look at periods of redecoration by creating a different atmosphere. For one young couple who wanted a California look in a sunny penthouse apartment, the partners painted walls white, used brown and white chintz

The convertible room

Designed for teen-agers by the interior design team of Shean and Fraser, this room can become a comfortable guest room when a youngster goes off to college. on upholstered pieces, lots of plants and appropriate accessories.

They do many children's rooms. They recently decorated the seven-child household in New Jersey of Secretary of Treasury William E. Simon — and are likely to do sitting rooms rather than bedrooms for teen-agers from 13 years up. The room can become a guest room or den when the teen-ager goes off to college, but meanwhile it provides a with-it place to entertain friends.

For example, one room for a 17-year-old boy combines sleeping and entertaining possibilities with good looks. Mrs. Fraser explained. Etageres on either side of a sleep sofa hold the stereo and a collection of shells. Swivel lamps on the wall eliminate the need for end tables with lamps. A white zebra-patterned rug and lizard-vinyl walls enliven the room, while a French chair with painted yellow frame sparks traditional warmth. A handsome black and beige knitted flax designed by Brunswick is used on the sleep sofa and is soil proof "even if someone puts his shoes on it."

When a couple goes into retirement, the women advise them to take the best quality furnishings of small scale. They are also advised to take upholstered things — sofa, side chairs and so on, "because people don't really want to live with other people's upholstered things," and to use easy-care fabrics and wall coverings.

"The most challenging move is likely to be from a cold to a warm climate — the northeast to Florida, for example," Mrs. Fraser remarked. "Then they may feel differently about decorating when they are confronted with such environmental charms as flamingoes and the like."

In their own decorating they try "to avoid mob psychology," she says. Although they prefer French furniture, they may use lucite tables with Regency. Clare Fraser may lean more to contemporary fabrics influenced no doubt, she says, by her husband and children, whereas Liz Shean may lean to French all the way.

Both women abhor super attractions in the home. They "loathe wall-to-wall carpeting, shag rugs, big tassels on draperies, swags, metallics in fabrics, heavy colors such as avocado, gold, maroon and muddy blue."

They also don't like beds in the middle of the room — Liz Shean would always put hers in an alcove — or ultra fancy faucets.

For her spring wardrobe

First Lady insists on American designs

WASHINGTON (AP) — First Lady Betty Ford's new spring wardrobe will be made and designed in America. It also will carry an anti-inflationary look.

Mrs. Ford, a bargain-conscious shopper, read about designer Albert Capraro in the Washington Star-News last weekend and was struck by the story's report that his clothes sell for as little as $70, her press secretary, Sheila Weidenfeld, said.

Capraro, of New York City, was asked by Mrs. Ford's staff to bring sketches to the White House. He flew here Wednesday with a dozen.

The First Lady was described as insistent on buying clothes made and designed in the United States.

But, Mrs. Weidenfeld said, another important factor was cost at a time when Mrs. Ford, like other U.S. housewives, is watching her pennies to counter the impact of inflation.

She couldn't afford couturier dresses, her press secretary said.

Mrs. Weidenfeld said Mrs. Ford ordered two of the dresses and now awaits Capraro's return with sketches of other garments that would be tailored to make best use of her own supply of fabrics.

Capraro was quoted by Women's Wear Daily as saying Mrs. Ford told him: "I don't have a large budget for clothes. So I want to work out with you a spring wardrobe of clothes that will suit many purposes. Ones that I will feel comfortable in for many events. Frequently I have to change on a plane — so they have to be able to work at a moment's notice."

Mrs. Weidenfeld said Mrs. Ford began the talk with Capraro by showing him two or three of her dresses she especially liked to give him an idea of what she had in mind.

It happened Capraro had designed them before setting up shop for himself.

Delighted at the discovery, the First Lady and the designer got down to business and Capraro soon will be returning to the White House, Mrs. Weidenfeld said, with sketches and renderings of dresses he proposes to make for Mrs. Ford.

His day dresses are expected to retail around $80, with evening gowns at $200. She also asked Capraro to make up five evening dresses from fabrics President Ford brought her from his November trip to Japan.

Capraro described Mrs. Ford as a perfect model: size six, 5 feet 5½ inches tall, weight 106 pounds.

He said her eyes change from blue to green depending on the clothes she is wearing.

She was very open about talking about the type of clothes she wants especially since her operation. While she doesn't want to concentrate only on high necklines, she is very definite about wanting clothes to cover her arms, he said.

Twelve-year search turns up mother of adopted child

NORWICH, Conn. (AP) — Barbara Faulkner found her past in the phone book.

After a 12-year search she stumbled upon her natural mother and her brothers and sisters right in her own town.

Barbara grew up in New Haven, the adopted daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Ives Sr.

She found out she was adopted at the age of 9 when she ran home and asked: "Mommy, what's an adoption? The kids were talking about it." Her mother explained it to her after dinner.

Not until she was 19 did she see papers with her original name, Sharon Lynn. "But what stunned me was that there were five other children. I wondered what they looked like. I wondered how many were brothers, how many were sisters. I wondered if they looked like me or had feelings like I had."

Although she knew she was born in a car on a California highway, she knew her natural mother had returned to New Haven. She concentrated her search there and continued it after her marriage to Leroy Faulkner. But it was in vain until the couple and their four children moved to Norwich to be closer to Leroy's job.

While visiting with new neighbors Mrs. Faulkner flipped through a telephone directory. "We were just getting acquainted, and as I joked that I was born on a California highway this name popped right out at me." It was her mother's unusual first name and middle initial.

She thought, "What will I do with this name? Shall I call and say 'Hi. This is Sharon. You left me on a highway in California. Are you coming back for me? Should I joke about it? Should I cry?"

With the aid of her husband, they tracked down one of her natural brothers living in the Norwich area. Ten minutes later he was knocking at Mrs. Faulkner's door.

"It had been almost 30 years and he said he didn't want to wait another day. I showed him the papers I had and he showed me a picture of his mother."

Both brothers visited her the next night and explained that whenever they had asked about a "little girl" their mother put them off.

After meeting with her natural mother, Barbara learned that she was put up for adoption because her mother had to work. Two of her brothers had also been placed in an adoption center, but had been taken out when the mother could afford to care for them, she said.

"I don't condemn her. She had to work and was going to be divorced. She had to accept anything," Mrs. Faulkner said.

Being adopted, said Barbara, never bothered her, "because a real mother and father are the ones who care for you, love you, are there when you need them, and understand when you need understanding. And I had all that."

But she urged parents to always tell the truth to adopted children. "It saves real, deep trouble."

Old shirt solves off-pattern size

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY — My Pet Peeve is with those people who push their grocery carts right up against the meat counter and then others cannot get near enough to make a selection. Several of these in a row can cause a lot of waiting for working people who are in a hurry. The stores could post a sign asking customers to leave carts four or five feet out from the meat counter or ask for more consideration of others. — VIRGINIA

DEAR POLLY — Do tell Helen that a friend of mine has a collection of match books displayed on a fish net that hangs on the wall in his family room. — CLARA

DEAR POLLY — Do tell Helen who wishes to display her collection of match books to pull each over carefully from the stapled end and cut this off. Glue covers all over the top of a card table, coffee table or other small table and fit them closely together in different directions. More than one person can see the covers at a time. After they are securely glued and dry cover with two coats of clear shellac or varnish drying well between each coat. Such tables are fascinating to look at. — ANNE

DEAR POLLY — I was stuck in a snow drift late at night and had no shovel — I removed a hub cap from a wheel of the car and with it removed enough snow from the front and back of the car to get going again. This was a bit hard on my back but worth it. I hope the idea helps someone else in a time of trouble. — MRS. D.T.

DEAR POLLY — I always have had trouble fastening my bracelets. One side always slipped off my wrist before I could hook it. Now I put a piece of tape on the loose end and stick it to my wrist. This holds it in place while I clasp the ends together. — MONICA

Polly's problem

DEAR POLLY — I am writing to ask where I can obtain a size 18½ man's shirt pattern. I have checked all the pattern books and asked around but cannot find one. I can get a size 17½. Is there a special pattern company where I could get the size I need? — EVELYN

DEAR EVELYN — If you have gone through all the pattern books without success I suggest that you take an old shirt of the correct size and carefully rip it apart. Use the pieces as a guide for cutting your own pattern. Mark each piece as you go along and make notes as to type of seams and stitching. — POLLY.

Young Career Woman named

Mrs. Robert (Lana) Liston, 507 Sunset Drive, has been named Young Career Woman by the Sedalia Business and Professional Women's Club (BPW).

Mrs. Liston, nutrition and health coordinator for the Head Start program, was chosen because of "her significant achievements in her career area and her outstanding contribution to her community." Mrs. Anne Hamilton, club president, said.

Mrs. Liston, who holds a bachelor's degree in home economics from the University of Missouri-Columbia, will compete with other outstanding young career women during the state BPW convention in St. Louis April 11 to 13.

The Young Career Woman program is BPW's way of highlighting the significant achievements of young business and professional women, Mrs. Hamilton said. Women interested in membership information should contact her at 827-1652.

How to Cash in on the Boom in Rare Plates

NORTHBROOK, Ill. — A successful art dealer in this Chicago suburb has announced a new, easy way to start collecting rare porcelain plates with high resale potential.

According to Thomas Gilmore II, president of this dealership, one exceptional plate priced at $25 in 1965 now brings $1,050, and another selling at $10 in 1969 now sells for $245.

Mr. Gilmore says, "Since many plates do not increase in value, amateurs often make serious mistakes." He offers a free report on what to look for, when to buy, what to pay and much more. It even includes special offers on eagerly-sought collector plates at modest cost.

To get your free report with no obligation, just send your name, address, and zip code to Bradford Galleries, 365B Bradford Place, Northbrook, Illinois 60062. A postcard will do. Because of limited quantities, please mail your request before January 25, 1975.

A conservative view

Can the GOP elephant survive? Maybe

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — An attractive young gentleman from Princeton dropped by the other day, eager to talk about his term paper in political science. His topic: "What Lies Ahead for the Republican Party?"

Kilpatrick

The honest answer — the answer to every such question — is, "It depends." That adds up to a pretty short term paper.

The party's future depends, in my own view, largely on the answer to this question: How quickly, and how convincingly, can the Republican party identify itself as the party of responsible conservatism? If the party has a future, under the Republican label, it lies in such identification. If the GOP foolishly tries to be all things to all people, in an effort to "broaden its base," the party will go the way of the Whigs a century ago.

My young friend from Princeton had taken a year from his studies in order to work in several Republican campaigns. It proved a discouraging task: All his candidates lost. He found it hard to attract volunteer workers; he found it hard to raise money. He had good candidates to work for, but in 1974 they were tainted candidates: They were REPUBLICAN candidates. It was the label that killed them. It was like vichyssoise by Bon Vivant.

Well, I said, this was understandable. Unfair, perhaps, but understandable. As the November elections approached, how were "Republicans" generally identified? These were the wonderful folks who gave us Nixon and Agnew. Even before the verdicts were rendered in the cover-up trial, the party was seen as the party of corruption. If the voter wanted one dismal picture, frozen in a caricature upon his eye, he could envision Spiro Agnew, the apostle of law and order, sitting at his vice presidential desk, saying good morning to the bagman.

In the popular view, the Republicans were seen not merely as the principals of Watergate; they were also the architects of recession, inflation, unemployment, and no gas today. They were the party of the wheat deal; they were the party of Harold Carswell, who was to represent mediocrity on the high court. The image was terrible.

Yes, the image was distorted, imbalanced, unfair. Among thousands of Republicans in public life, only a handful actually were involved in Watergate. In any rational view, the Democrats who dominated Congress must bear much of the blame for our economic ills. Worldwide forces contributed heavily to inflation. Nixon's accomplishments in foreign affairs ought to be remembered. In November none of these things counted for much. The voters took dead aim on the Republican party. They left the poor old elephant bleeding from a hundred wounds.

Are the wounds fatal? That is the term paper question. No one ever named me the team doctor, but I suggest that the GOP's best hope for survival lies in the public opinion polls that find the American people predominantly "conservative" in their own sense of political identity. It is a curious thing. When the pollsters set out to measure affiliations and attitudes, they find Republicanism never has been lower or conservatism higher. Plainly, the two are not identified with each other.

What do the people mean when they tell Dr. Gallup they are "conservative"? My young friend suggested that the people are not speaking politically, but personally. In their own everyday lives, they fear excessive debt; they want safe streets, well-disciplined schools, competent public services, freedom from governmental harassment. They want honest work for honest dollars, and they don't want to be hassled around.

The Republicans' problem is to understand these concerns, and to translate them into positive political action. The Republicans have to have an affirmative program — something better than mere nay-saying, something more than "me, too." If such a program is seen as a conservative program, maybe the elephant will get on his feet and recover. If not, the graveyard yawns.

'Admired' list is bad joke

WASHINGTON — I usually don't sneer at the major polling organizations — not even when, years before a presidential election, they give us those absurdly hypothetical results of a race between, say, George Wallace and Ronald Reagan. On the whole, Gallup, Harris and a few other pollsters tell us a lot about the mood, the passions, the prejudices of 213 million Americans.

Rowan

But I can't help but recoil in disgust every time the Gallup Poll produces its lists of the "10 most admired" men and women. These half-baked, contradictory lists are so absurd that one could almost believe Gallup is determined to discredit the polling business.

First of all, those polled get no lists of names to help them. So they are inclined to think of persons who have gotten the most publicity or notoriety. It becomes almost automatic that the President makes the men's list and his wife makes the women's list. Almost everybody knows their names!

But consider President Ford. Nothing matters more to most Americans these days than his handling of a grim economic crisis. The Harris Poll says that a stunning 86 per cent of Americans disapprove of the way Mr. Ford is handling the economy, while only 11 per cent approve.

Yet, Gallup tells us that the American people admire Mr. Ford more than any man in the world — except for Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and evangelist Billy Graham.

The contradiction is obvious and beyond dismissal.

And look at whom Gallup lists as the seventh most-admired man in the world! It's Richard Nixon, the man who went on nationwide TV to swear that he was not a crook, then resigned when his own tape recordings proved that he was.

Gallup's own poll of last Aug. 11 showed that 73 per cent of Americans believed that Nixon either planned the bugging or, at least, knew about it and participated in the cover-up. Further, Gallup reported that a substantial majority, 64 per cent, favored Nixon's impeachment.

What kind of absurdity is it, then, when Gallup tells us five months later that the American people admire Nixon more than all the men in the world except Kissinger, Graham, Ford, Sen. Edward Kennedy, Wallace and Nelson Rockefeller? A rational man is bound to conclude that there's something grievously wrong with either the poll or the American people.

Gallup's lists of "most admired" people are in truth worthless as a gauge of anything.

Someone might be naive enough to try to make something of the fact that in the top 10 are Graham, Ford, Wallace, Nixon, Barry Goldwater and Ronald Reagan, all of conservative persuasion, plus Rockefeller and Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., who are not exactly radical liberals. You just might conclude that the U.S. has become a very conservative country.

But, then, how does the liberal, Kennedy, manage to be listed as the fourth most admired man in the land? And how does one square the Democratic landslide in November with this supposed public preference for conservatives?

I haven't said a word yet about the women's list, which is just as ridiculous. You've got former Israeli premier Golda Meir as the most admired, followed by Mrs. Betty Ford and Mrs. Pat Nixon. Then come Rose Kennedy, Happy Rockefeller, Rep. Shirley Chisholm, Prime Minister Indira Gandhi of India, Coretta King, Lady Bird Johnson, Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis and Mamie Eisenhower.

It's mostly a list of people married to a U.S. president or vice president, with scant regard to any achievements by the women themselves, or it's an expression of sympathy for women who have endured hardship and tragedy.

Mrs. Ford and Mrs. Rockefeller are both lovely ladies, but I rather suspect that even they laugh at the suddenness with which the Gallup Poll elevated them to "most admired" pedestals.

How silly can we Americans become? Or is the question how silly a poll can become?

Advice for unions: cool it for awhile

The Pettis County United Labor Committee was formed last week in Sedalia. Its announced purpose is to serve as the "voice of labor" in community and political affairs.

Local industrial development was singled out as one area that will get attention from the ULC. At the group's organizational meeting, two participants touched on this subject.

A spokesman for the AFL-CIO gave local labor leaders this advice on how to deal with new industries: "Sit down on them and organize them."

While recognizing that the normal and proper function of union labor is to organize, we would add one bit of what seems very timely advice: cool it.

In flush periods of continuous and healthy industrial and economic growth, there would perhaps be no reason for such a caveat. But such conditions do not confront us today. In fact, just the opposite seems to be the case, with local industries caught in a period of serious constriction, while unemployment is rising at a rapid, if not alarming, rate.

Make no mistake about it: the local economic climate warrants serious concern on the part of all Sedalians. An aggressive, militant unionization effort at this time could prove, as they say, counterproductive.

This is not an anti-labor polemic, but merely what we consider to be a realistic assessment of the facts. Nothing will be gained if we kill off, or scare away, the geese that lay the golden eggs.

We believe the ULC in Pettis County can make a positive contribution to community affairs. But a hasty flexing of its new-found muscle would be ill-advised, considering the delicate economic conditions that face us at this time.

"I HOPE WE'VE GOT A PIECE OF THE ROCK."

By JACK ANDERSON With Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — It isn't enough for President Ford to offer new economic solutions. He should also change the economic guard. For the old guard has badly mismanaged the economy.

Their failure can be measured in human misery. They are responsible for throwing hundreds of thousands out of work, causing thousands of businessmen to go broke, pushing the poor deeper into poverty and reducing the purchasing power of all Americans.

There is no longer any doubt that the Federal Reserve Board restrained the money supply too much. This caused interest rates to soar until businessmen could no longer afford to borrow capital. They were forced to cut back production, lay off workers and curtail expansion.

Of course, the President doesn't control the Fed. But his economic managers not only worked closely with the Fed but completely misread the economic signs.

They got him all fired up against inflation when his biggest worry should have been recession. On Oct. 15, he declared war on inflation with this ringing appeal to the American people: "Postpone unnecessary borrowing. Wait for interest rates to come down. Save as much as you can."

Thirty days later, the President's economic advisers began to panic over the economic slump and they got him to issue a new clarion call, advocating exactly the opposite.

"Somehow the word has gone out that the best way to defeat inflation and revitalize the economy is to curtail spending," he said, not mentioning that he was the one who had put the word. "Nothing," he declared, "could be further from the truth."

Only last October, President Ford was calling for a 5 per cent tax increase. Within 60 days, he began to change his tune. Now he is talking about a multibillion-dollar tax cut to restore consumer purchasing power.

Merry-go-round

'Old guard' makes mess of economy

Yet the people who misled the President and brought hard times to millions of Americans are still running the economy.

Footnote: Ironically, the reformers on Capitol Hill are turning against the man who was the first to blow the whistle on the Federal Reserve Board and to challenge the economic thinking in the White House.

They are seeking to strip the aged but alert Rep. Wright Patman, D-Tex., of his House Banking chairmanship. Several reformers have formed a strange alliance with the bankers' bloc to oust the old warhorse who has always fought the big banks.

WATCH ON WASTE: The Gama Goat, a bouncing new Army field truck, may not be as rugged as its namesake but it is as stubborn to control. The $200 million project has been plagued with problems, but the procurement just keeps going on and on.

Now a secret General Accounting Office report indicates that the Army brass lied to Congress when they claimed the truck's defects had been corrected.

The brass assured the House Armed Services Committee in 1972 that the problems had been solved and the truck was running fine. Taking them at their word, Congress permitted them to go ahead with the procurement.

But the GAO report, which we have obtained from locked files, alleges that the Gama Goat isn't doing well at all. "Almost all of the Army personnel expressed dissatisfaction with the vehicle," declares the secret report. The users felt "the vehicle lacks durability... was difficult and exhausting to drive... and that it was oversophisticated and a piece of junk."

The GAO also questioned the mobility of the truck, which is supposed to deliver supplies to the front lines. It should be able, therefore, to roll over rough terrain and to cross streams like a barge.

Yet drivers claimed, according to the GAO, that the truck was difficult to steer up hills, "handles poorly in light snow... slips and slides in shallow mud... and cannot cross tundra."

The drivers also complained that the truck has a tendency to pop out of gear. Unless they are careful while shifting, "the axle or propeller shaft universal joints will break."

As for the truck's swimming capability, the report charges that the Gama Goat can enter the water only from gently sloped banks with firm soil. "Speed of entry is restricted to a maximum of two MPH and... cannot be made into a... current in excess of four MPH or when the wind blows in excess of 20 MPH."

Incredibly, the GAO also found that "most of the vehicles have damaged tailgates that would cause them to sink." Indeed, the vehicles are in need of constant repair, the GAO states.

Despite these failures and the millions spend on the project, the Army is seeking another $6.5 million for a "product improvement program." The GAO has suggested maybe the Army should just dump the project.

Footnote: A spokesman said the Army is "still evaluating" the secret GAO findings and expects to have a response by April. Meanwhile, the spokesman insisted that the truck's "performance has been more than satisfactory since its initial fielding."

What is a fair division of income between owner of purebred beef cows and an operator who furnishes all labor, feed, and other expense?

Basically, income from this type of cow herd arrangement is divided 20-30 per cent to cow herd owner and 70-80 per cent to the individual who furnishes labor, feed, and other cash production expenses. The exact percentage share depends on the value of contributions provided by each party. To place a value on these contributions refer to Book for Missouri Farm Leases. Pay particular attention to page 10 as this example is similar to the situation raised in this question. Forms to compute percentages are available at Extension office in Sedalia.

Investment credit

Farmers are asking questions about what qualifies for investment credit. Machinery, equipment, and livestock are the main things that qualify. Storage facilities like silos, grain bins, and corn cribs qualify for the credit. Buildings do not qualify except for buildings that house property used as an integral part of farming and the buildings use is so closely related to the building that the building will be replaced if the property it initially houses is replaced. This would include such buildings as confinement swine buildings and some dairy and poultry buildings. Machine sheds do not qualify for investment credit.

Yield test

The yield test bulletins for 1974 have reached the Extension office. You may have a copy by calling the Extension office or it may be picked up in person.

These corn yield tests include about all commercial hybrid varieties grown in this area.

The corn yields are reported from nine different locations in Missouri and the grain sorghum was tested in five locations.

This program was enlarged when a farm organization contributed research money. It is now possible for this testing program to go out and buy commercial hybrids that would not enter the program otherwise.

Seed corn

It appears that corn planting seed supplies will be tight for the 1975 planting. Just how tight is difficult to predict but Bill Murphy estimates that total supply available will be between 19 and 20 million bushels.

The expected need for corn seed in the U.S. is expected to be around 19 million bushels. So the total supply might be sufficient, except it will not be possible to get all of the seed "out of the pipeline." The normal amount left in the "pipeline" is usually around 15 per cent, and it will take extraordinary effort by the companies in making shifts of supplies from area to area during the planting season to get this as low as 5 per cent. Also, availability of seed of different maturity hybrids is not likely to fit the varying maturity needs over the corn belt.

Some companies will offer some seed of lower than normal germination because of frost damage. This is possible because after being frosted, seed either will or will not germinate. Seed that does germinate should not be reduced in vigor, as commonly happens when low germination is caused by disease, mechanical damage, etc. A company that is selling 80,000 kernels per bag, will charge $47.50 for a bag of their best germinating single cross seed, 90-100 per cent germination, as compared to $19.00 per bag for a 50-60 per cent germination seed bag, with intermediate grades. For the lower grade this would figure out to about $32.00 for the number of germinating kernels as compared to the top grade.

Planting the lower germination seed lots can be expected to give somewhat uneven stalk distribution. This would cause some slight reduction in yield. We do not know of research that would pinpoint this possible effect, but it should be slight because of the compensation ability of corn plants. Adjusting the planting rate to give the same amount of germinable seed per acre as one would have with high germination is more important.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A spokesman for the Internal Revenue Service says former President Richard M. Nixon has paid back taxes for 1970 through 1972 but has not produced a sum he agreed to pay for 1969.

The IRS ruled in April that Nixon owed a total $432,787 — back taxes for the four years, interest for the 1970-72 years and a 5 per cent negligence penalty.

The figure included $148,081 for 1969, on which the statute of limitations had expired.

At the time, Nixon agreed to pay the whole sum without a contest. On Sunday, however, the IRS spokesman quoted IRS Commissioner Donald C. Alexander as saying the 1969 amount was yet to be paid.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Washington's Roman Catholic Archbishop William Baum told an Episcopal congregation in a sermon that Roman Catholic, Episcopal and other Christian faiths should strive for a common communion. Two of the worshippers were President and Mrs. Ford.

Archbishop Baum told the congregation that the denominations of Christianity "must stand together, work together and give common witness" to their beliefs.

The ecumenical service was held Sunday at St. John's Church across Lafayette Square from the White House. After the service the archbishop joined the Rev. John C. Harper, rector of the church, in bidding farewell to the Fords, who often worship at St. John's.

ROME (AP) — Pope Paul VI has called on all men to help bring the world real peace by seeking "the peace of conscience."

"This last part of the 20th century (has been) laden with the most upsetting experiences," he told about 1,000 people who gathered Sunday in rain outside the papal palace. The pontiff spoke from the window of his top floor study.

He urged mankind to come to terms with "the problem of the peace of conscience which can be tackled satisfactorily only by the courageous sincerity of remorse, the need for forgiveness and the hope of renewal."

MADRID (AP) — Spanish Premier Carlos Arias Navarro describes Gen. Francisco Franco's health as normal for a man of his age, and says the head of state displays "extraordinary mental lucidity" at cabinet meetings.

In a newspaper interview, Arias Navarro said Franco, who is 82, works at the meetings "with absolute normality. He intervenes in the meetings, makes questions and actively follows the debates."

Last July, Franco was reported in critical condition after a blood clot formed in his leg. The interview with Arias Navarro was published Sunday in the Madrid monarchist newspaper ABC.

Oil, fat supplies are down

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — An Agriculture Department expert said today that world supplies of fats and oils, essential as ingredients and for the preparation of many foods, will be down about two per cent in 1975 from last year and that consumers will continue to see high prices for those items.

Reduced soybean production in the United States in 1974 is the main factor in the tighter fats and oils situation according to Alan E. Holz, an analyst in the department's Foreign Agricultural Service.

"Tighter supplies will mean that vegetable oil prices are likely to stay near current high levels and that consumers may need to tighten their belts a notch, even if supplies are augmented by a U.S. stocks drawdown," Holz said.

The 1974 U.S. soybean crop was down 21 per cent from the record harvest in 1973.

Soybean oil is used extensively in the manufacture of margarine, cooking oil, salad oil and shortening. Raw soybean oil prices have soared the past year, reaching a record one-month average of 43 cents a pound last August.

Those have declined to around 35 cents per pound at Decatur, Ill., the main market, but still have averaged about double what they were 18 months or so ago.

Retail prices of margarine have doubled in some cases. One-pound packages recently have sold in the Washington, D.C., area for 79 cents a pound, only 10 cents less than butter made from milk fat. The price spread between margarine and butter historically has been much greater.

Total U.S. fats and oil production for human food is estimated at about 10.6 million tons this year, a decline of 1.7 million tons from the record output of 1973, Holz said. In foreign countries, production is expected to be 33.8 million tons, an increase of 700,000 tons despite reduced oilseed crops in some areas.

Holz said that, in addition to world production of 44.4 million tons this year, there is a potential for adding 640,000 tons of oil from reserve U.S. stocks, meaning that total world availability of fats and oils in 1975 may be about 45.1 million tons.

Although the use of U.S. reserves would boost 1975 world supplies slightly above 1974, the increase would amount only to seven-tenths of one per cent.

Holz said that increase "is significantly below the normal two per cent growth in world population, however, so that per capita world oil availability in 1975 will decline slightly."

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government experts think the long decline in American egg eating is expected to continue at least until producers step up production and retail prices come down.

According to Agriculture Department records, the average American ate 334 eggs in 1960 but had reduced his consumption to 287 in 1974, the lowest consumption rate since the mid-1930s. No official projections have been made for 1975, but egg producers have trimmed output because of high costs and severe financial losses.

William E. Cathcart, a poultry specialist in the department's Economic Research Service, explains the decline by noting the cost of eggs has been rising along with most everything else, there has been a change in eating habits, and "the cholesterol scare hasn't helped egg consumption either."

Russians may grab spotlight

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union may try to upstage the United States during next July's joint U.S.-Russian manned space mission by having a second crew of cosmonauts in orbit at the same time.

That's the opinion of some American space observers who have been studying the Dec. 27 launching of a Soviet Salyut 4 space station. They say the high altitude of the station will give it a long life and the possibility of being inhabited by several different crews during the next year.

The Soyuz 17 crew was launched Friday night, perhaps to visit the station for 30 to 60 days, which would be a record for Russian cosmonauts.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration says it has no evidence the Salyut will be manned next July during the joint mission in which American and Soviet spaceships are to link up in orbit. But officials don't rule out the possibility.

By having two cosmonaut ships in orbit during the joint flight, the Russians could hope to influence some of the world that they have returned to the glory days of Sputnik when they were the undisputed leaders in space exploration — a role they lost to the United States' Apollo man-on-the-moon program.

It also would draw attention from the fact that the much more sophisticated American Apollo craft will be making all the critical rendezvous maneuvers to achieve docking with the Russian Soyuz in July.

And it would emphasize that the Soviet space program is going strong, actually accelerating, at a time when the United States' program is diminishing.

Behind the speculation of U.S. observers is the fact that shortly after Salyut 4 was launched, ground control guided it into an orbit 220 miles high, 60 miles higher than earlier Salyuts. At that altitude it could stay aloft for a year or more before falling back into the atmosphere.

U.S. experts say the Russians would have no trouble tracking two manned spaceships simultaneously. They note there were three Russian manned vehicles in orbit at one time in 1969.

High school youth fatally wounded in gun accident

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Police said Paul N. Frank, 18, was shot to death late Saturday when a revolver being handled by another man discharged.

Officers said a 21-year-old man was arrested and would be taken before a magistrate today.

Frank was a senior at Southwest High School and was visiting an older friend and neighbor when the shooting occurred.

New Kansas governor sworn in TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) — A man who vacillated over a decision to become a candidate, then won primary and general election races by the narrowest margins in years, became Kansas' 39th governor Monday.

Robert F. Bennett took the oath of office shortly after 11 a.m. on the south steps of the Kansas Capitol under clear to partly cloudy skies and the temperature near the 20-degree mark.

It was the first time in eight years that a Republican was inaugurated as governor and the first time in 20 years that the inaugural ceremonies were conducted on the steps of the statehouse.

Sworn in with the new governor was his running-mate, Shelby Smith, Wichita, who is moving to the position of lieutenant governor from a seat in the Kansas House.

Also taking oaths of office were three holdover Republicans and two Democratic newcomers.

Commencing new terms in the offices they have held were Secretary of State Elwell M. Shanahan, Insurance Commissioner Fletcher Bell, and State Printer Robert R. Sanders.

The newly elected Democrats are Curt Schneider, who is succeeding fellow party member Vern Miller as Attorney General, and Joan Finney, who is replacing Republican Tom Van Sickle as Treasurer.

Also subscribing to oaths of office were Supreme court Justices Alex Fromme, David Prager and Alfred G. Schroeder. They were retained for new terms by voters in a non-partisan referendum.

Later today, the 1975 Kansas legislature was to convene, beginning organization for a session predicted to last 75 to 90 days.

The inauguration of Bennett marked the 61st time that the oath for the office of governor had been administered. But it was the first time it had been for a four-year term.

Under a constitutional revision, the term of governor has been increased from two years to four years, with a provision that a governor may not be elected to more than two consecutive terms.

This means that governors in the future may equal outgoing Gov. Robert Docking's record eight-year tenure, but they will not match it mark of four consecutive terms.

Bennett, 47, is making the transition from Kansas Senate Leader to Chief executive after first announcing he would not seek election as governor, then reversing himself.

He won a hotly-contested four-way race for the Republican gubernatorial nomination, polling less than one-third of the vote as he defeated runner-up Don Concannon by 530 votes.

In the general election, Bennett polled fewer votes than his two opponents combined, but defeated his nearest rival, Democrat Vern Miller by 3,677 votes. It was the closest general election contest for governor in Kansas in 34 years.

Automation at work

With a Circu-Lator in your bin, simply begin to fill the drying bin with wet grain as fast as you harvest. (You have a wet holding capacity as large as the Circu-Lator bin.) Dial the desired moisture content on the automatic control — it will automatically signal the tapered sweep auger to remove an even layer of grain as it becomes dry. This grain is transferred to an adjacent bin for storage and cooling.

The drying process proceeds automatically, 24 hours per day without babysitting, until adjacent storage bins are full.

The Circu-Lator bin is then filled and recirculated under automatic control until dry. No babysitting is required.

Over 4000 Circu-Lators in operation

During the past six harvest seasons, 4000 Owner-Operators have proven the success of the Circu-Lator across the Corn-Belt and around the World. Somewhere not too far from you a Shivers machine is installed. Ask your Shivers Dealer for the location, then visit the Owner-Operator for first-hand information.

Southwestern Bell president is dead

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Angus S. Alston, who rose from a telephone coin box collector to head the giant Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., died here Sunday. He was 60.

Alston was president, board chairman and chief executive officer of Southwestern Bell, which services 11 million telephones in five states. A company spokesman said he had been suffering from cancer.

Memorial services will be held here Tuesday at Graham Memorial Chapel on the campus of Washington University, where Alston served on the board of trustees.

A native of Salt Lake City, Utah, Alston joined the Bell system in 1936 as a coin box collector with Mountain States Telephone and Telegraph, located in his home city.

He often recalled that he enjoyed every job he had held in the telephone business.

"Collecting coins from pay phones was even interesting as it brought me in direct contact with different people in different situations," he said.

When he left Mountain States company in 1962 Alston was vice president in charge of personnel.

Alston served two years as vice president and general manager of the Pennsylvania Bell Telephone Co., and was then transferred to American Telephone and Telegraph in New York City.

At AT&T, he held three executive positions before he was elected executive vice president in 1967.

Alston was named president of Southwestern Bell in April 1970. He became board chairman and chief executive officer of the company in October 1973.

Southwestern Bell, whose general headquarters is located here, serves the states of Missouri, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Kansas and Texas.

Alston is survived by his widow, Darlene, a son and a daughter.

Warnings will be broadcast

WASHINGTON (AP) — Warnings of nuclear attack, hurricanes, tornadoes and other disasters will be sent out by the federal government on an FM radio frequency.

The White House Office of Telecommunications Policy said Sunday the warnings will be issued through the National Weather Service, broadcasting 24 hours daily over VHF-FM radio channels 162.40 and 162.55 megahertz.

John M. Eger, acting director of telecommunications policy, said most home radios are not presently capable of receiving these channels, so the new system requires installation of a special adapter.

But the device, described as inexpensive and already on the market, is expected to be built into new radios as they are manufactured.

"The system incorporates a special tone alert signal permitting home receivers to be activated automatically if desired by the owner," Eger said.

Steelers 16, Vikings 6

Pittsburgh's defense buries Minnesota

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — It was Mean Joe Greene, his wrecking machine — and an old man's dream.

Not that Franco Harris didn't have something to do with it. After all, a Super Bowl rushing record is not to be overlooked.

But in the long run — which Minnesota never had — it was Pittsburgh's ferocious front four that ultimately gave the Steelers and their 73-year-old owner, Art Rooney, their first National Football League championship after 42 years of frustration.

Greene, Dwight White, Ernie Holmes and L.C. Greenwood had about as much subtlety as a cement wall — and all of its effectiveness — when the Vikings tried to move the ball on the ground. Seventeen yards was all they got, which is to say they got nowhere.

If there was any deception in Super Bowl IX, it was only in the 16-6 final score. The six points the Vikings got weren't really of their own making. They were the result of a blocked punt. So, in effect, the Steelers' defense came up with a shutout.

"They've never played a better defensive game, never," Coach Chuck Noll said emphatically. "Our defense has been fantastic all season and I think it's appropriate that they should finish things off like they did."

They finished off the Vikings not only by turning their running game into oatmeal but by turning quarterback Fran Tarkenton back into a scrambler. He'd sort of lost that image in the last season or two. But in chilly, overcast, windswept Tulane Stadium, he nearly lost a few limbs.

Tarkenton spent virtually the entire afternoon trying to avoid being ground into hamburger by the half-ton meat grinder known as Greene and Co. Rarely did he have a chance to set up and scout around, looking for a receiver.

And when he did throw the ball, the Steelers were usually there to spike it back down his throat, tip it away or intercept it. Of his 27 passes, only 11 wound up in a teammate's hands, the end result being 102 of the Vikings' total 123 yards.

Unlike Tarkenton, Pittsburgh's Terry Bradshaw usually threw the ball not because he had to but because he wanted to. He completed nine of 14 attempts for 96 yards, four of them coming on a fourth-quarter touchdown pass to tight end Larry Brown that sealed the Vikings' doom.

Bradshaw, who had been called everything in the book from just plain dumb to a quarterback who choked when it counted, knew exactly what he had to do in this most important of pro football games.

He just handed the ball to Franco.

Harris, combining the finesse of a slashing halfback and the brute force of a bulldozer, pounded out 158 yards on 34 carries and scored the Steelers' first touchdown with a nine-yard sweep in the third period, a run made delightfully easy by Gerry Mullins' block that changed Minnesota's Wally Hilgenberg from a linebacker into a cartwheel.

"You've got to be kidding me," Harris said when informed of his record performance that broke the marks of 33 carries and 145 yards and turned Miami's Larry Csonka into a Super Bowl second-best. "I can't believe it. I never thought it could have been that high."

In the end, though, the ultimate accomplishment was by Greene and his cohorts, who played a super game when a lot of people had thought they'd peaked two weeks ago, limiting the Oakland Raiders to 29 yards rushing in the 24-13 American Conference championship victory.

"I sat and watched the people playing in the Super Bowl for eight years," said Greene, The Associated Press' Defensive Player of the Year. "Now we've won it and it's even greater than I thought it could be. I finally got the Super Bowl ring. I finally got it."

The Steelers' first points of the game came on a safety. A safety, more than an interception or a fumble recovery, is like a road sign reading: "Falling Rocks."

It means, simply, that a player on the other team is in danger of being buried under a landslide — one of bodies rather than boulders.

That's what happened to Tarkenton midway in the second quarter. Buried deep in his own territory (as the Vikings were most of the game), he mishandled a pitchout to Dave Osborn, then was forced to pounce on the loose ball in the end zone.

The safety, the first in Super Bowl history, was the only scoring in the first half. It was strange, seeing a 2-0 score on a football scoreboard. It meant that Pittsburgh's offense, numerically, at least, had been equal to Minnesota's, which is to say ineffective.

But the strategy started working the moment they got their hands on the ball in the second half, when Bill Brown of the Vikings fumbled away the kickoff. Harris boomed through the left side for 24 yards, lost three on the next play, then careened in for the touchdown and a 9-0 lead.

It stood up until Matt Blair blocked a Bobby Walden punt early in the fourth quarter and Terry Brown scooped up the ball in the end zone for the Minnesota touchdown.

But, perhaps typically, Fred Cox' extra point was no good, hitting the left upright. So the Vikings trailed by three points instead of two.

Not that it mattered. They were already clearly on their way to losing their third Super Bowl game, not what you'd call a disgrace since getting into three of them is no mean feat in itself.

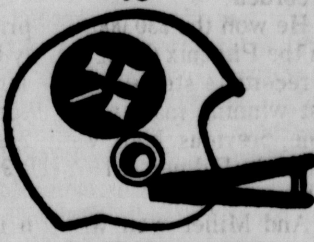

If they weren't dead then, they were 6½ minutes later. The Steelers took the ensuing kickoff and, from their own 34-yard line, careened down the field with the biting force of winds that whipped through the stadium.

With Harris and Rocky Bleier chomping up huge chunks of real estate like the homesteaders in the Oklahoma land rush and Bradshaw making things interesting with a 30-yard pass to Brown, Pittsburgh camped momentarily on the Minnesota doorstep.

Then Bradshaw swept right and, going at full bore, launched his touchdown pass to Brown dead center in the end zone.

Steelers celebrate win quietly

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The Pittsburgh Steelers felt too good to pop any champagne corks or toss their coach in the shower.

All they could do after winning Super Bowl IX was slap hands, hug one another and bask in the mellow satisfaction of the first National Football League title in the club's 42-year history.

"I'm sick and worn out but I'm a happy, happy man," said defensive end Dwight White, who played most of the game after spending a week in the hospital with viral pneumonia and losing 18 pounds.

"I feel so good I'm almost weak," tackle Joe Greene said as he milled around the subdued, steamy locker room.

"I just want to sit back and savor it," quarterback Terry Bradshaw said between puffs on a victory cigar, courtesy of Art Rooney.

Rooney, the 73-year-old Steeler owner, was off in a corner with his usual cap, overcoat and cigar — but minus the burden he'd carried in 42 years without an NFL title.

"I don't deserve much if any of the credit because my sons Dan and Art and Coach Noll have been running the team," Rooney said in his characteristic monotone.

"But this is still the greatest thrill in my life," he added.

"The other years were good years too despite the frustrations and I have no regrets, but I'm happy for our players, coaches and the people in Pittsburgh."

Rooney had a cigar for everybody in the locker room. NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle had a glistening, silver super bowl trophy for Rooney, whose dad used to run a saloon on Pittsburgh's North Side.

"This entire team dedicated this effort at winning the Super Bowl for Mr. Rooney," offensive tackle Jerry Mullins said after the team gave Rooney a game ball.

Mullins and the Steeler offensive line helped Franco Harris shake loose for 150 yards rushing, 13 better than Larry Csonka's old Super Bowl record.

The Steeler defense, which held Minnesota to 123 total yards, was keyed by defensive end L.C. Greenwood, who batted down three of Fran Tarkenton's passes.

A key factor was the play of reserve linebackers Loren Toews and Ed Bradley, who played most of the second half after Andy Russell and Jack Lambert were hurt.

"Our reserves came through for us," said Steeler Coach Chuck Noll, "but all year we've been doing whatever it takes."

Backup quarterback Joe Gilliam, who put Bradshaw on the bench early in the season, also made a contribution.

He suggested the play that led to a four-yard touchdown pass from Bradshaw to Larry Brown in the fourth quarter.

"That gives you an idea of how everyone was contributing," said Noll.

The victory left each Steeler $15,000 richer.

"The money is fine," said Joe Greene, "but you don't play like we did just for the money."

"I don't think we realize yet what we've done," said Bradshaw.

Things not quiet back home

224 Pittsburgh fans are arrested

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A "sea of humanity," frustrated by decades of losing Steeler football, rocked downtown Pittsburgh in a long-awaited victory celebration which was marred by a few raucous confrontations.

The outbreaks left 224 persons arrested and 35 persons — including nine policemen — with injuries, according to Police Superintendent Robert W. Colville.

A few store windows in the Golden Triangle district were broken, but Colville was unable to make an immediate assessment of property damage.

For most of the celebrants, Sunday night was a time for dancing in the narrow streets to the chants "We're No. 1" and "Dee-fense, dee-fense."

Car horns, bells and whistles resounded in the canyon of office buildings as the fans braved swirling snow and sub-freezing temperatures to vent their joy with the Steelers' 16-6 victory over the Minnesota Vikings in Super Bowl IX.

City fathers had asked fans to hold up their celebrating until this afternoon, when a motorcade will mark the team's return from New Orleans with the first National Football League title in its 42-year history.

But less than an hour after the game-ending gun sounded in New Orleans, police reported that a "sea of humanity" choked traffic at Sixth Street and Liberty Avenue, in the heart of the downtown district.

Tuscumbia stops Tigers in two overtimes, 58-57

(Democrat-Capital Service)

STOVER — The last time Green Ridge made it to the finals of an area tournament was 1957. That was prior to Saturday night's finals of the Stover Invitational.

"Green Ridge was in the finals of a four-team tournament in 1968 in Lone Jack, but the last time they ever got into a big one was in the 1957 Pettis-Benton County Athletic Association (PBCAA) Tournament," said Larry Barb Monday morning.

Although the Tigers were thwarted in their championship effort here Saturday night, it took the Tuscumbia Lions two overtimes to nip Barb's squad, 58-57.

"I can't really put my finger on it or point out any individuals," he said of his vastly improved team.

"We are much more confident than we were two years ago when I came here. It's that winning attitude and improved overall play that seems have helped us the most," he added.

The Tigers, who posted an impressive 18-9 log last season, got off to a slow start this year losing its first three. Green Ridge stopped that with a 72-59 win over Sacred Heart, but then lost to Sweet Springs by one.

Then came the first of five straight wins. Although that string ended with the double overtime loss to Tuscumbia (13-4), Barb wouldn't be happier.

"The kids know now that they can be competitive. The change in the team's and the school's mental outlook toward winning has been a big help around here," he said.

On Saturday night's loss, Barb said his team missed some shots that they normally make. "We hit 55 per cent against Otterville and 54 per cent against Lincoln. We hit only 34 per cent against Tuscumbia," he said.

Taking nothing away from the Lions, Barb lauded Tuscumbia's defense.

"That was the toughest zone defense I've ever seen," he said of the Lions' 1-3-1 set.

"They moved on it so well that it almost looked like man-to-man," he concluded.

The defense had a telling effect on Robert Risner, the team's leading scorer, who managed only nine points. Risner, listed as a 5-10 senior, still managed 13 rebounds.

Monty Graves was the leading scorer in the game, pumping in 17 for Tuscumbia. Joe Purchase netted 15 for Green Ridge. Dean Rupe and Kelly Harding followed Purchase with 14 and 12 respectively.

In Saturday night's other games, Stover trimmed Lincoln, 66-55, for third place, while slumping Cole Camp bell to Smithton, 73-61, in the consolation game.

Ron Hodges led Stover to its 10th victory of the season with 23 points. Martin White poured in 33 points to top the Smithton Tigers' effort.

Miller runaway winner in Open

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — So what do you do for an encore, Johnny Miller? "I don't know," the young man replied. "I can't top this. That's for sure. I'll probably never do this again."

"Just keep on playing. I guess. That's all I can do. Just take one step at a time. Put one brick on top of the other and try to build an Empire State Building out of it."

"I'll just go on to Tucson and try to play a good first round, then try to play a good second round and try to win the tournament and go on to Pebble Beach and try to win there."

"Everybody says you can't win the first three again. But if I can win at Tucson, I've got a good chance. Pebble Beach is like home to me. It's the kind of course I grew up on."

Miller, rapidly establishing the rich pro golf tour as his own private hunting preserve, took the first step towards matching last season's sweep of the first three tournaments with the easiest triumph ever recorded.

He won the $30,000 first prize in the Phoenix Open Sunday by a record 14 strokes — the largest winning margin in history. The previous high was 12 by Arnold Palmer in the 1962 Phoenix Open.

And Miller won with an incredible score of 260, the lowest 72-hole score recorded in 20 years, since Mike Souchak set the record at 257 in the 1955 Texas Open.

"I can't believe it," Miller said. "I can't believe I'm that much under par."

He was 24 under, posting rounds of 67, 61, 68 and 64 and accumulating a tournament total of two eagles and 25 birdies on the 6,726-yard Phoenix Country Club course.

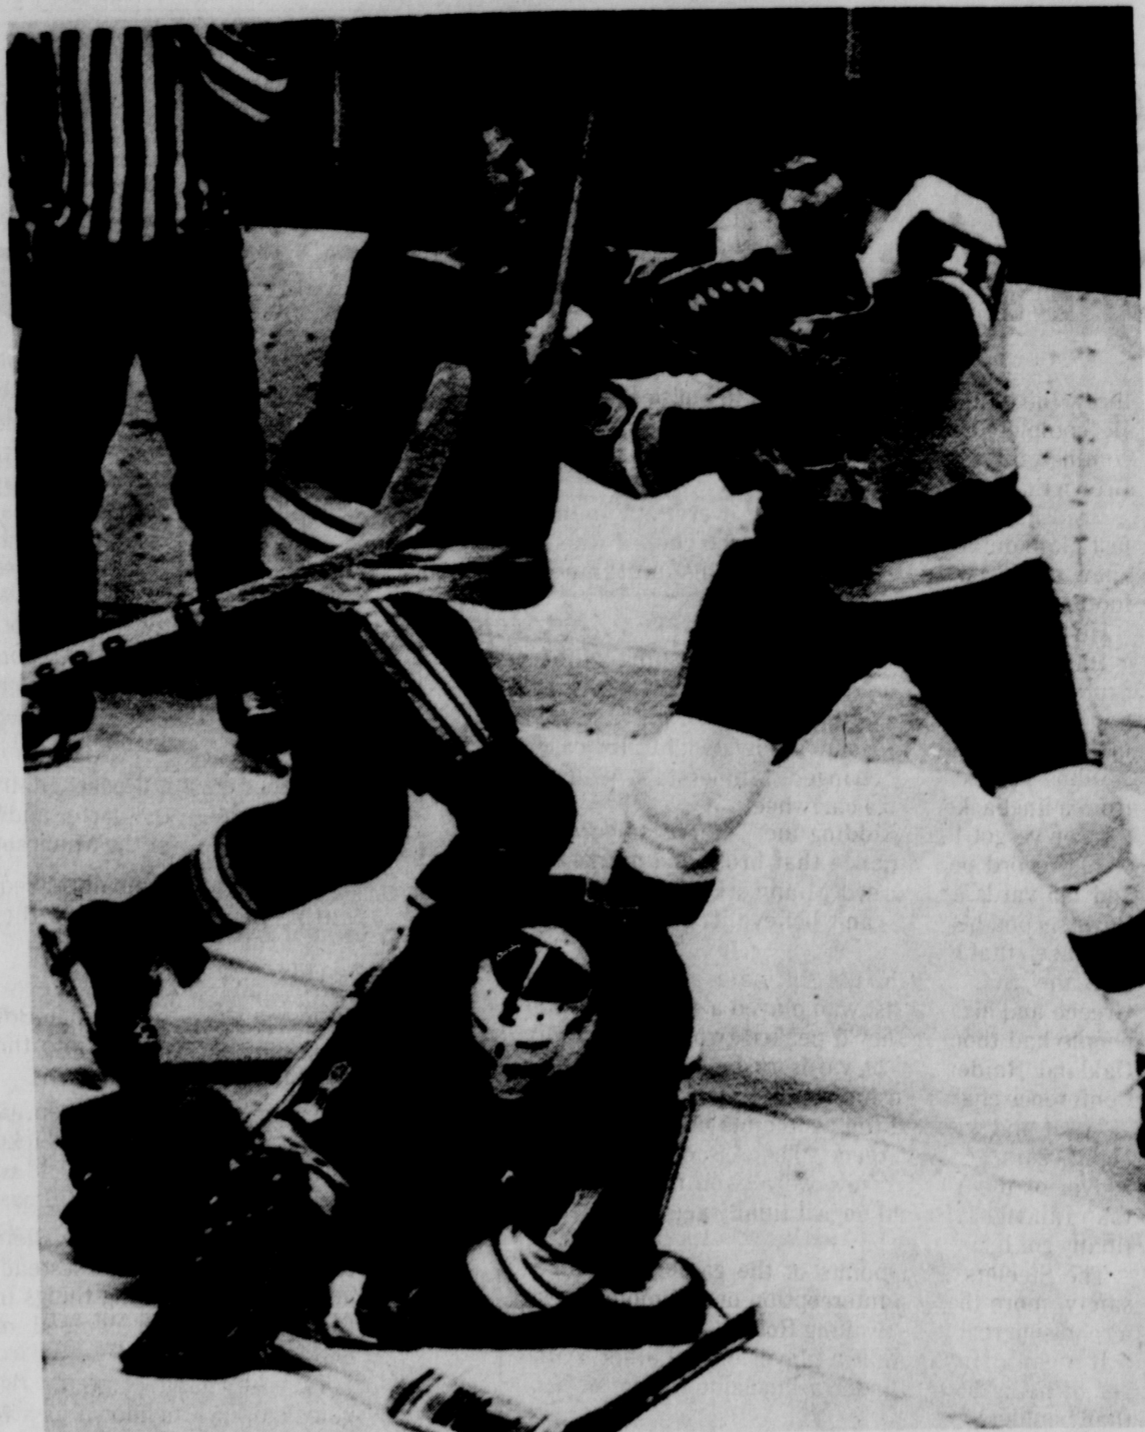

It was an absolutely spectacular performance by Miller, who last season won eight American tournaments, a record $353,000 in prize winnings and Player of the Year honors.

He made believers of the rest of the game's gypsy tourists, who had to content themselves with playing for second place. Jerry Heard, a long-time close friend of Miller's, gained that position with an eagle on the final hole. He had a final-round 65 and a 274 total.

"Right now, Johnny's the best in the world," Heard said.

The recent record supports that appraisal. In his last three starts Miller has won by 8, 7, and 14 strokes.

"It's ridiculous," Miller said. "I don't think I'm that much better than everyone else. It's just that everything seems to be going my way."

Toronto will pass up chance at NBA team

PHOENIX (AP) — The economic pinch that has been strangling the nation for about the past year appears to be taking its grip on the National Basketball Association.

The Associated Press learned Sunday night that Toronto, expected to become the league's 19th franchise, would bypass the opportunity because of the tight money situation. There just aren't any investors willing to pay more than $6 million for a franchise.

New Orleans, which joined the league this season at a cost of $6.15 million — the price for a new franchise for next season probably would be higher — has been floundering both on and off the court, and investors are not willing to take the risk, particularly financially.

"The economic crunch may delay expansion," one of the league's top executives told The AP. "There have been no applications for the franchise that I know of, and the Toronto situation hasn't moved forward — mostly due to the economic situation."

While the issue of the Toronto franchise was expected to be put in abeyance by league owners at their annual meeting prior to the NBA All-Star game, so was the matter of a successor to Commissioner Walter Kennedy.

Kennedy, who has announced his retirement as of June 1, 1975, said he did not anticipate that the Selection Committee to choose his replacement would make a formal recommendation to the owners at their meeting Tuesday.

The AP learned that four candidates, including Simon Gourdine, the league's Deputy Commissioner and Vice President of Administration, still were under consideration to replace 61-year-old Kennedy, who has held the league's most prestigious position since Sept. 1, 1963.

Kennedy said he did not expect the five-man selection committee, which he heads, to take more definitive action on a new Commissioner until a few weeks from now, when it will convene again.

Big 8 set for loop play

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The stage is just about set for the start Saturday of another Big Eight Conference basketball race.

Kansas State and Nebraska collide at Lincoln, Neb., in a regionally televised Saturday afternoon game. Three games will follow Saturday night, Missouri at Kansas, Colorado at Oklahoma and Oklahoma State at Iowa State.

Prior to the beginning of league play, only two teams have unfinished business. Oklahoma has a home game tonight against Athletics in Action, and Kansas State is host to Arkansas Wednesday night.

Kansas, boasting the second best record in the conference, will be opening defense of its title against the surprising Tigers, who are 9-3 and minus all of their starters from last season. Kansas is 8-4 and has a four-game winning streak.

The Jayhawks, winners of the Big Eight preseason tournament in late December, have everybody back from last season except guard Tom Kivisto and are the odds-on favorites in this year's championship race.

Kansas Coach Ted Owens is quick to note, however, that the Jayhawks "didn't just dominate the conference last year. We had several low margin games. I think we have to be eight to 10 points a game better this year."

The Jayhawks lost only to K-State in last season's conference race but defeated three teams by only three points or less.

K-State was 11-3, good for second place, but lost all five

Ted Hood named top yachtsman

BOSTON (AP) — Ted Hood, a Marblehead, Mass., sailmaker and designer who skipped Courageous to a successful defense of the America's Cup last fall, has been named 1974 Yachtsman of the Year by the nation's yachting editors.

Sally Lindsay, a sailmaker from Swampscott, Mass., who won the 5-0-5 competition in Bermuda, was named Yachtswoman of the Year for the second straight year in the balloting announced during the weekend.

Central Missouri State among early loop leaders

By The Associated Press
Missouri Rolla, Southeast Missouri and Central Missouri have started the Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association championship race with victories.

All three teams won Saturday night. Rolla, led by Bob Stanley's 30 points, pulled away in the second half with a 67 per cent shooting performance for a 70-63 home court triumph over Northwest Missouri State. David Alvey made 22 points for Northwest.

A 26-point show by Steve Valli helped Southeast Missouri to a 92-82 decision over Northeast Missouri State. Larry Rogers, Southeast's freshman center, contributed 16 points and got 11 rebounds. Charles Ros sank 20 points for the losers.

Central Missouri took charge in an overtime period and downed Southwest Missouri 106-97 in a game, tied 93-93 in regulation, played at Central. Rick Gosnell dumped in 42 points for the victorious Mules and Daryl Garrison 38 for Southwest.

William Jewell and Central Methodist launched the Heart of America Conference season with triumphs. The Jewells, with Charles Funk collecting 24 points, rolled over Baker in a road game 67-45. Central Methodist trounced Missouri Valley 77-61 Friday night.

Tarkio's conference game at Graceland was postponed because of snow.

Southwest Baptist continued to lead Missouri independent teams, running over the School of the Ozarks on the latter's court 103-89. The Baptists are now 9-1 and had four players in double figures against School of the Ozarks, topped by Roy Fields' 30 points.

Independent Missouri Southern was the only team in tournament action Saturday night, losing 94-72 to the host school in the championship game of the Cameron Classic in Oklahoma. Southern is now 7-5.

Devine names ex-MU player to Irish staff

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — New Notre Dame football Coach Dan Devine has nearly completed a planned nine-man squad of assistant coaches with the naming of Arkansas assistant Mervin Johnson as offensive coordinator.

The 39-year-old Johnson was appointed Sunday by Devine, for whom he played and served as an assistant coach at Missouri. Johnson has been an assistant coach at Arkansas since 1962.

Johnson was Missouri's team captain in 1957, and as a senior was voted the top student athlete in the Big Eight.

Briefly at Arkansas as an assistant, Johnson returned to Missouri as an assistant under Devine, then moved back with the Razorbacks.

Johnson is the eighth Irish assistant named so far. Six were retained from Ara Parseghian's 10-man staff, one other came with Devine from the pro ranks.

Jim: "Today's declarer was a little stingy. He had bid four but wanted to make six. He discarded a diamond on dummy's ace of clubs and led a heart to his ace; then he played the king of hearts. West showed out and the contract was now in jeopardy."

Oswald: "The way the cards lay there just was no way to bring it home. South tried to get a diamond discard on dummy's fourth spade but East ruffed the third spade lead and spoiled that plan."

Congress to debate whether full Watergate story revealed

High-speed chase ends in death

WASHINGTON (AP) — One of the first issues scheduled for debate when the new Congress convenes next week is whether the American people finally have the full story of Watergate and whether the scandal has created support for tighter control over the FBI and CIA.

Thus Watergate, which dominated events on Capitol Hill for the past two years, remains a powerful influence.

Congressional sources expect these questions to be raised early in the new session: — Will the final report of the special Watergate prosecutor's office give a complete account of the scandal that drove Richard M. Nixon from the presidency?

—Will that report lay out why some people were prosecuted and others were not, including why Leon Jaworski agreed to allow former Atty. Gen. Richard G. Kleindienst to plead guilty to a misdemeanor charge in connection with the ITT investigation? —Will anyone review all the tapes from the Nixon White House and determine if portions should be made public? —Does anyone know the full story of the involvement in Watergate of the FBI and the CIA? —And will the public ever know the details of the domestic surveillance activities of the FBI and CIA, not only during the Nixon presidency but also under his predecessors?

Once again, attention will focus on the House Judiciary Committee, scene of the hearings on the impeachment of Nixon.

Chairman Peter W. Rodino Jr., D-N.J., wants his committee to rule on the Justice Department budget, which includes the FBI. Justice is one of several major government departments that now deal solely with the appropriations committees of Congress for approval of their budgets.

A major exception is the Defense Department, which goes through a two-stage procedure of getting authorization for expenditures and then appropriation of the money.

"Rodino wants an ongoing type of oversight," a committee source said when asked why the chairman was pushing to require the Justice Department to submit its budget requests to the Judiciary Committee.

The Watergate prosecutor's office and the FBI also are going to come under close scrutiny from the Rodino committee.

A subcommittee headed by Rep. William L. Hungate, D-Mo., plans to hold hearings late in January on the final report currently being drafted by special prosecutor Henry S. Ruth and his staff.

Ruth opposes trying to make the final report a complete history of Watergate that would include information never used in court, such as activities of Nixon associates who never were charged with a crime.

Jaworski was quoted earlier this week as saying he doubted a case could be made against Nixon intimate Charles G. "Bebe" Rebozo for his role in handling campaign contributions.

Rebozo has denied any wrongdoing and said he was "delighted that Jaworski came to the only conclusion any fair-minded person would come to based on the facts."

Ruth had no comment. But sources in the prosecutor's office had suggested long ago that it was wrong to speculate that Rebozo would be indicted.

Some members of Congress would like Ruth to lay out in the final report all he learned about Rebozo.

But it is believed that Rodino agrees with Ruth that such a procedure would violate Rebozo's rights.

The prosecutor's final report does appear certain to revive the simmering dissatisfaction among Senate liberals over the handling of the Kleindienst-ITT case.

"How did Kleindienst help?" asked one Senate source who noted that Jaworski had said Kleindienst's cooperation had been a consideration in allowing the former attorney general to plead guilty to a misdemeanor charge.

Kleindienst was charged with failing to testify fully before the Senate Judiciary Committee when he was asked about the handling of the ITT antitrust settlement. He received a one-month suspended sentence.

In contrast, former California Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke was charged with perjury. He was convicted and received an 18-month suspended sentence.

So far, no other charges have been brought in the ITT investigation. Gen. Robert C. Mardian. The question of whether Nixon or the government controls the tapes is before the courts for decision.

If the decision is that the government owns them, Ruth would oppose being given the task of listening to them and cutting out any Watergate tidbits that ought to be made public.

But James F. Neal, chief prosecutor at the cover-up trial, where 28 presidential tapes were played publicly for the first time, believes someone should go through the tapes if they end up in the hands of the government.

Interviewed at his Nashville, Tenn., law office, Neal also said he knew nothing more about possible CIA involvement in the Watergate break-in than came out at the cover-up trial.

The defendants made an issue of the CIA backgrounds of the Watergate burglars, but the jury rejected their contention that the spy agency's involvement may have been greater than anyone knew.

But new allegations about CIA activities that may have violated restrictions against the agency conducting domestic operations has led to new congressional investigations in the post-Watergate mood of the new Congress. But no one knows yet how much of these probes will ever become public.

SIKESTON, Mo. (AP) — A deputy sheriff involved in an auto chase Saturday night that ended in the death of the driver he was pursuing, a 23-year-old woman, said Sunday the woman apparently was unfamiliar with the road.

Ava Brazeal of Sikeston died instantly when her car failed to negotiate a 90-degree turn on a county road and slammed into the bank of a ditch, said Scott County deputy Gerald Inman, who was following her in his patrol car.

County Prosecuting Atty. James Moore III said Sunday he had received a preliminary report of the incident and that "it seems like the officer was justified" in pursuing the woman.

Inman said he was called to the Grant City Cafe by workers who complained that a woman had created a disturbance and had taken money from a cash register. He said that when he arrived, the woman had left. While he was talking to the barmaid, he continued, a woman drove up in front of the cafe.

"I started to walk toward her car, but she drove around to the back of the building with her lights off," Inman said. "I got in my car and pulled up to the driver's side and turned on my red light. When I did that, she took off at a high rate of speed."

U.S. aircraft manufacturers benefit from Mideast oil profit

NEW YORK (AP) — Much of what the Mideast earns from the oil it takes out of the ground is being put into the air, and U.S. aircraft manufacturers are benefitting more than those of other nations.

More than $700 million of commercial aircraft were sold to Mideast carriers by U.S. manufacturers in 1974, and there are indications that the transactions will continue for several years.

These sales are distinct from orders for military aircraft, the largest of which was announced last week and which would involve Saudi Arabia in payment of $756 million for 60 Northrup Corp. jet fighters.

Mideast Markets, a publication affiliated with the Chase Manhattan Bank, quotes Amer Sherif, an important Arab air official, as saying Arab airlines will more than double capacity in the next five years at a cost of $2.5 billion.

It interprets this and other comments by Sherif to mean that the 90-odd jet aircraft owned by 14 Arab carriers should double in number, "with an emphasis on the purchase of wide-bodied convertible aircraft for quick shipment of heavy or oversized industrial equipment."

It quotes Sherif, who is assistant secretary-general of the Arab Transport Organization, as saying in an interview that current plans by Mideast airlines involve a need for additional capacity equivalent to 115 Boeing 707s by 1979.

Among the transactions agreed upon during the past year, according to Mideast Markets, are these: —Two Boeing 747SP and three advanced 727-200 jetliners, by Syrian Arab Airlines at a cost of $100 million.

—Two extended-range L1011 TriStar jets for Gulf Air, the carrier representing Bahrain, Qatar, the United Arab Emirates and Oman, to be delivered by Lockheed Aircraft Corp. Additional sales are possible under the contract.

—Four Lockheed L1011 wide-body transports by the Saudi Arabian airline, plus two Boeing 707-320 long-range convertible cargo-passenger transports.

—A letter of intent by Egyptian to buy six DC9 series 50 twin-jet transports valued at $45 million from McDonnell Douglas Corp.

—Two second-hand Boeing 747-100s for $64 million by Trans Mediterranean Airways, the Lebanese freight carrier.

—Three Boeing 737-200s and one 727-200 to be delivered this year to Air Algerie.

—Five Boeing aircraft purchases by Iraqi Airways.

If the projections hold, it would mean a significant contribution to the U.S. trade balance, as well as to the companies involved.

A 'toothless tiger'?

Critical of election campaign reforms

WASHINGTON (AP) — Proponents of stricter election campaign laws say the new election reform law, pushed with great ballyhoo as an answer to Watergate, is a toothless tiger because Congress and President Ford have failed to appoint members of the law's enforcement commission.

Three months after the Campaign Reform Act was signed and two weeks after it became effective, not one member of the commission has been named, and reformers are screaming that the names surfacing as possible appointees smack more of cronyism than clean-up.

"This bill was clearly a response to Watergate," says Neil Gregory, co-director of the Center for Public Finance of Elections.

"The people think there has been a response, but there hasn't been and there won't be until a proper commission is named and begins enforcing this legislation," Gregory says.

Common Cause, another group that lobbied heavily for the bill, says failure to enforce its provisions will lead to "disillusionment for those who felt that Congress, by passing new campaign reform legislation, has made a significant response to Watergate."

The law sets limits on how much a candidate may collect and spend in quest of public office and controls who may give and how much. Until the commission is appointed, candidates seeking advice or clarification of the rules have no place to go even though they conceivably could go to jail for lack of adequate counsel on what the law requires of them.

President Ford signed the law on Oct. 15 but so far has not named his two appointments to the Federal Election Commission which must administer it.

The Senate leadership pushed through approval of its two choices at the end of the 1974 session but took them back after complaints that there had been no hearings. Nothing has come from the House leaders.

Ann Landers

Ann traces letter to prank students

Dear Ann Landers: When I read your advice regarding the five-year-old boy whose mother put ribbons on his blonde curls and gave him a tea set for Christmas, I decided that maybe you could help me, too.

I am a girl, 52 years of age. My problems started when my father knitted me a pair of argyle socks for my fifth birthday. Those socks did something to my life, Ann. From then on I wanted a crew cut. I refused to wear silk underwear like the other girls in my gym class and insisted on green jockey shorts. Now I hate dresses and I go everywhere in jeans and boots.

Lately I've been thinking of changing my name from Esther to Ralph. But deep in my heart I want to be straight. Is it too late for me? —Gay In Connecticut

Dear Gay: My spies have located you "In Connecticut" and would you believe they traced your letter to New Haven?

Look, kids, Yale is a very tough school. If you want to stay there you're going to have to spend more of your time hitting the books. Please save your stamps (or write to your folks) and let me alone.

Dear Ann Landers: A couple was having hard sledding. They were rubbing each other the wrong way. The bickering and quarreling were ruining their relationship. Finally the man said to his wife, "I'm sorry, dear, for the way I've been treating you. Perhaps you should have married a better man."

She replied, "I did. The expected pattern is to progress, to improve year after year, but too often we go backwards. The persons we were in our younger years are often better than the people we are now. We allow defeats and disappointments to dull the luster of our lives. We let habit blind us to the good qualities of those who are closest to us.

"Love is something you must work at. It cannot be sustained unless it is cultivated and nourished. One way to renew the original thrill of young love is to take time to count the things for which we should be grateful."

"You should have married a better man," said the husband. "I did," replied the wife. "That better man can still be found, if only we take the time and trouble to revive him." — Rabbi Samuel M. Silver, Temple Sinai, Stamford, Conn.

Dear Rabbi Silver: Your words are pure gold. Thank you for a beautiful message. I'm sure many readers saw themselves in this column today.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a secretary who conducts herself like a lady. For the one hundredth time, I have heard, FEWER FISH AND CHIP SHOPS LONDON (AP) — Seven hundred of Britain's 12,000 fish and chip shops are closing every year because of the soaring price of fish and competition from American and Chinese take-away food parlors, says a market survey ordered by the fish and chip trade.

Machinists

vote to go out on strike

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Members of Machinists Union Local 837 have voted to strike against McDonnell Douglas Corp., of St. Louis.

The vote was taken Sunday afternoon at a meeting in Kiel Auditorium here and was approved by 96 per cent of those attending the meeting.

The strike will affect 12,000 workers in St. Louis. The president of the local, Gus Troia, said the shutdown would affect all McDonnell Douglas facilities throughout the country. The union's contract expires Feb. 2, but the strike would not go into effect until seven days later. Negotiating sessions are set for this week.

The machinists are seeking a 10 per cent wage increase during each of the next three years.

Angry man foils try at robbery

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Albert Struckhoff, 52, told police he "just got mad" when two men tried to steal rifles and a shotgun from his home, so he clubbed one of them unconscious.

"I just got mad and made up my mind that if I caught them it would be them or me," said Struckhoff.

He said the incident occurred when he returned to his south St. Louis home Saturday night and noticed that a light in a bedroom was on and the back door was partially open.

As he entered the kitchen, Struckhoff told police, he saw three gun barrels appear through the door to the bedroom as one of the men attempted to leave the house carrying the weapons—two 30.06-gauge rifles and a 12-gauge shotgun.

Struckhoff said he grabbed the barrel of one of the guns and clubbed the man on the head with it as he entered the kitchen. The man was knocked across the kitchen and through a plate glass door to the back porch.

The man, who police identified as Robert Vogel, 39, of St. Louis, tried to get up and stagger away but was restrained by a neighbor until police arrived, Struckhoff said.

Vogel was reported in serious condition at a St. Louis hospital with a fractured skull. He has been charged in a warrant with second-degree burglary.

Police said the second man escaped with the two rifles valued at $600.

He 'wants to eat'

Librarians find their liberator

By MURRAY OLDERMAN

SAN FRANCISCO — Picture the librarian — a meek, prim figure in mythical River City, prey for a Harold Hill-type of character to come along; or thin, stern lips compressed in a permanent admonition to keep it to a whisper.

Well, Kevin Starr sure isn't like that.

He has a round-nosed face, glasses so thick they look like a chunk from an ice house, sandy, matted hair, a bear and a thick body that belongs to a high school lineman — which he was.

Kevin is the city librarian of San Francisco. He is 34 and a scholar. He is also a prodigy of politics, the pet of Mayor Joseph Alioto who appointed him to his $24,000-a-year post last June.

Why in the world would Kevin Starr, A.B., A.M., Ph.D. and M.L.S. — also the author of "Americans and the California Dream, 1850-1915" — want to be a staid librarian?

"I want," he says succinctly, "to eat."

He has a wife and two daughters and spent five years writing his scholarly treatise, which sold 7,500 copies and earned him $10,000, or an average $2,000 a year. Coupled with a modest salary as an associate professor of literature at Harvard University, this wasn't going to produce financial independence.

Besides that, he had already concluded that there are "too many people in universities, all these millions doing virtually nothing — the work week is way down for professoriat."

He returned to San Francisco, the city of his origin — he is fourth generation — as an aide to Alioto and then was moved into the library.

"Now," he says with typical ebullience, "I'm on my way to being a great librarian."

"The abandonment of the library to pure technocrats is analogous to the abandonment of education to technocrats. Why should people in the museum world, etc., be charged with the speculative life?"

"I dig politics. I like my colleagues at City Hall better than those at Harvard. I like their minds better. They're not as boring as academics."

And educationally, on a personal level, the political experience has been broadening. He knows now, for instance, that it costs $70,000 to install a couple of toilets.

Starr went before the Board of Supervisors to plead on an esthetic level for more library facilities and all they wanted to know about was the cost for extra toilets. He had to go out and do his homework. He also learned the political facts of life.

"The police get attention for their needs," he says. "They have political clout. Why not the library? My job is getting these underfunded, undermanned libraries going again."

The whole of the city library system with its 27 branches has 1.2 million volumes. The Harvard University library has 8 million. Starr has no illusions about making his little niche the treasure of knowledge in the Western world.

"The literate poor," he says, "use our libraries. About 29 per cent of the city's total population, mostly blue collar. That's still not as much as the public library in Scarsdale (N.Y.)."

Since June, he points out proudly, he has created 80 new jobs with federal money.

He has not abandoned his own scholarly pursuits. He gets up at 6 every morning and works three hours on his second historical volume, "Americans and the California Dream, 1916-1976."

Kevin Starr is a product of that dream.

"We were just one notch below poor," he says. "I was raised in the Potrero Hill housing project. My father was blind. My mother was ill after a nervous breakdown. They were split up. I have needed glasses since I was six years old but never got them till I was 14, from a public health nurse. I had gotten rotten grades in school. All of a sudden I couldn't believe what I could see."

He went on to the University of San Francisco and then Harvard for graduate study and an eventual teaching job. "From Potrero Hill to Harvard," he shrugs, "is only a phase. You can go to Harvard and see the parameters of the universe."

His speech is sprinkled with Thomas Aquinas and Existence and Essence. He is also earthy and pragmatic and realistic. "I had an unholy terror," he says, settled in among his volumes, "this job would eat me alive." He is responsible for 300 full time and 200 part time employees of the library system.

"People resent me," he acknowledges, "because I didn't work my way up through the ranks. I'm the only person in the library who doesn't have civil service tenure."

He doesn't look worried. (NEA)

Abducted infant unharmed

OTTO, Mo. (AP) — A 10-month-old girl who was believed to have been abducted from her mother has been returned unharmed, Jefferson County authorities said.

The girl, April Lynn Fleetwood, was returned to her mother, Mrs. Geraldine Fleetwood of Imperial, Mo., early Sunday.

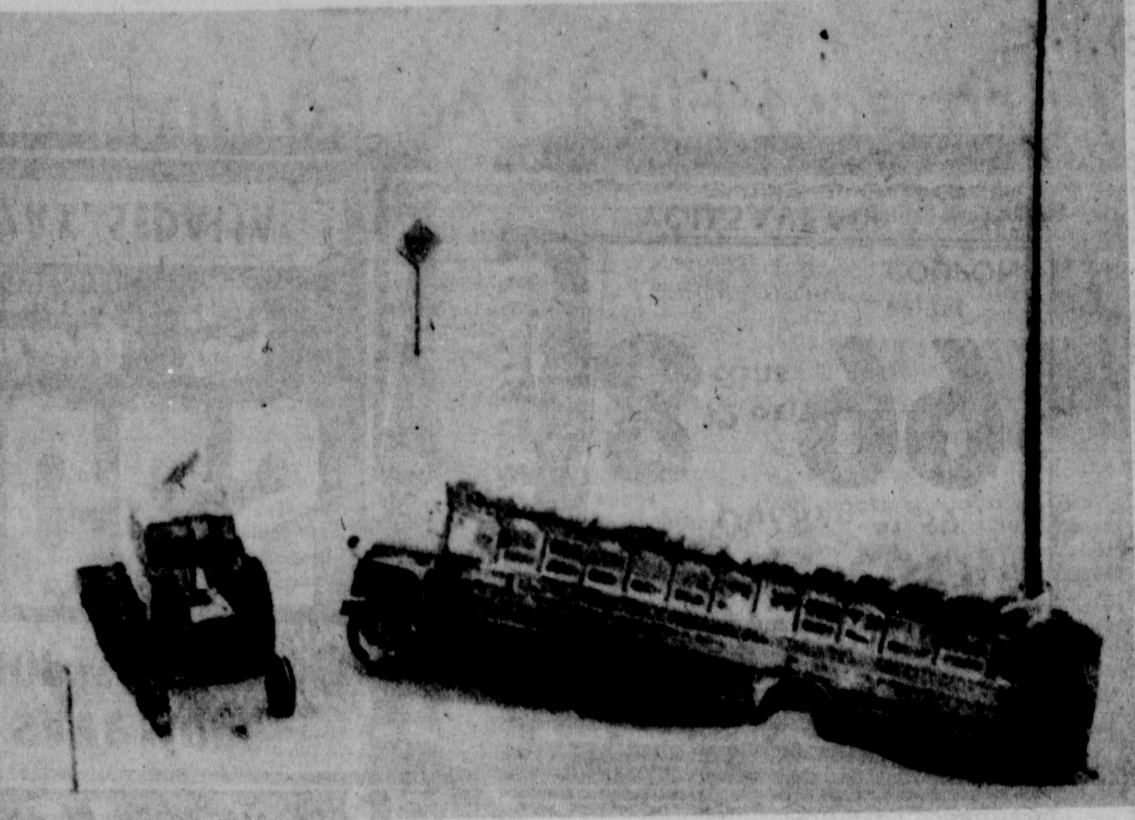

Police said suspects in the abduction were Marvin Pennington, 38, and his wife, Iris, 32. Jefferson County authorities said the couple would be arraigned today on kidnapping charges.

Authorities said the abduction took place Saturday afternoon at a laundrette here where Mrs. Fleetwood was doing her family's laundry.

Mrs. Fleetwood said the couple had been playing with the girl and then had left the laundrette. Then, authorities said, Mrs. Pennington allegedly re-entered the laundrette and picked up the baby.

"I thought she was just going to hold her a minute," said Mrs. Fleetwood. "I turned to fold some laundry and as I turned back she (Mrs. Pennington) was going out of the door, and my little girl, Michelle, holered, 'Mommy, they're taking April.'"

Stranded

A school bus was stranded by Saturday's blizzard that swept the northern United States. Here, a snow plow passes the bus as roads were being cleared Sunday. The bus went into the ditch near Searless in southern Minnesota. All passengers were evacuated safely. (AP Wirephoto)

Lawrence Lamb, M.D.
Medicine won't cure arthritis

Dear Dr. Lamb — I would appreciate your ideas on arthritis. The whole medical profession seems to be at a loss on that one. Those of us who have passed our three score and 10 need help from somewhere.

I'm 84-years young, working every day and enjoying it. Thus far I have refused all dope. Please express your opinion on aspirin. I refuse to use it. What I want is prevention.

Dear Reader — To be as active as you sound at 84 you must have done a lot of preventing already. Working and enjoying it is one of the best preventions of general aches and pains and more serious medical problems I know of. Most people who have lived long life spans have done the same as you have.

I wish I could tell you there was a cure for arthritis. The osteoarthritis which you have is an accompaniment of increasing age. Some have it worse than others. It is not a new disease. Even the ancient dinosaurs had it.

The degeneration of the bones is thought to be a sort of wear and tear response. That is why it often affects the weight-bearing joints, like the knees and hips.

If you are not having too much discomfort you might as well do without medicine. Aspirin for this type of arthritis is useful only to the extent that it relieves pain. It won't cure or change the progress of the arthritis.

You do need to maintain the full range of motion of your joints. That will help to keep you working and enjoying it for another 20 years. Try to move every joint in your body through a full range of motion several times each day. That means bending forward on your ankles to stretch your ankle tendon, straightening your knees as far as they will go, moving your thigh as far forward, backward and to the side as you can and methodically moving every joint in all directions as far as possible without straining yourself. Such exercises help prevent loss of motion later. Keeping active usually involves at least some of these movements and helps a great deal.

For mild osteoarthritis with no evidence of deformity, medicine to control discomfort, if needed, and general medical support is usually enough. For other forms of arthritis, such as rheumatoid arthritis, or more serious osteoarthritis an arthritis specialist, at least to evaluate the course of the disease, is a good idea.

It is also important to keep your weight down. Obesity merely adds to the wear and tear on weight-bearing joints. I would suspect that overweight is not one of your problems. It is interesting how seldom it is a problem in people over 80 years old. One of my doctor friends once observed to me after a trip to Florida that he seldom saw any old fat people, just old skinny ones. There ought to be some sort of a lesson in that observation. (NEA)
